THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN.

A Model Greeley and Brown Club Dissected.

An Honest Democrat on the Tammany Candidate.

Grant's Election the Only Salvation for the South.

The Franking Swindle Encouraged by Honest H. G.

Proofs of an Alliance Between Tammany and the Reformers.

A Model Campaign Club.

A Greeley and Brown Association was formed in the Twelfth Assembly District shortly after the Cincinnati Convention made its nominations. JOHN DUKE, who repaired the City Hall cupola, and who does considerable carpenter work for the City, was the organizer of the club. The others, the most active in the movement, were JAMES MCCARTY, PAUL SCHNITZLER, VICTOR HAMBURGER and a man named CARGILL. MCCARTY and SCHNITZLER were delegates or alternates to the Cincinnati Convention. MCCARTY, it is said, was discharged from the Post-office and had until recently, some kind of a sinecure place in the Health Department. SCHNITZLER keeps a lager-beer saloon, and was also, it is said, discharged from the Post-office. HAMBURGER is reported to have been at one time one of HALL'S City Marshals, and is an Ex-Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue. CARGILL is an ex-policeman, and also an ex-clerk of the Health Department. Gathering around him this choice selection of ex-school ex-office-holders, City Commissioner Duke called a meeting at No. 21 Avenue D. As it would have been a forcible proceeding for the corporal's guard of Liberal Republicans in the district to assemble and call themselves the political club, Mr. Duke went among his Tammany friends, and on the night of the meeting about 150 Tammany Democrats filled the hall. They were composed principally of BILLY DONNELLY'S gang, and the denizens of Battle-row, a line of houses in this quarter of the City, so called from the pugnacious character of its inhabitants. BILLY DONNELLY keeps a notorious brewery on Avenue C, and his customers led the applause. The speaking, if well acted, and the counterfeited enthusiasm immense. The Dunnellens and the representatives of Battle-row enjoyed the affair hugely, regarding the whole thing as a joke. Horace Horace's name could not be mentioned without hammers of applause, and, indeed, everything said was applauded, and a continuous uproar of approval kept up which occasionally reduced the speaking to little more than dumb show. Under such auspices was the Liberal Republican organization of this district organized, to remain inactive until GREELEY and BROWN are inducted at Baltimore, and the two candidates come out in their true colors as the regular Tammany Hall nominees.

"He Means Well."

From Harper's Weekly.

Our friends think also that Mr. GREELEY means well. Perhaps he meant well when he encouraged and justified secession—when he "argued" President LINCOLN to buy a peace—when he promoted foreign intervention—when the gravely perplexed Mr. LINCOLN by his Niagara performances—when he complained to Mr. SEWARD long and truly that he had not been rewarded with an office—when he half-patronized Mr. SWEENY and TWEED—whenever he has done any thing which showed his fatal want of judgment. Had he been President instead of LINCOLN, he might have meant well in surrendering to the rebellion. Do our friends think it enough to mean well, if you have no judgment?

The Truth Most Powerful.

Mr. GREELEY'S friends in Iowa are certainly men of mind, if the following be a fair sample of their acts and views. A correspondent says that at a meeting in New-Valley, in that State, the other night, gotten up to ratify the Cincinnati nominations, the purpose was materially changed by the news of the nomination of GRANT and WILSON. They were unanimously for GREELEY, and the editor of the Greeley organ began shouting the moment.

Texas on Greeley.

A communication from Houston, Texas, assures us, in the following words, of the regard in which GREELEY is held in that State: "The Democratic Party of Texas refuse to swallow the hero of Chappaqua! The very men who but tumbled him through this State last year are now his bitterest enemies. * * * If GREELEY is nominated at Baltimore, Texas will give the Philadelphia nominee 20,000 majority."

Money Reports from Chemung County.

The Elmira Advertiser refuses to credit the brass and falsehoods of the Greeley organs. In its issue of Monday it says:

"Here in our own locality Republicans have an opportunity to know something of the contemptible and feeble character of the movement. Two or three desperate efforts have been made to organize a club, and they have proved utter failures. The Republican Party maintains a solid front, just as it always did. There is absolutely no break in its ranks. Some few disappointed office-seekers and disaffected men, and perhaps a half-dozen in whose case no interested motive can be seen, constitute the whole. It is about equal to the Johnson scare of 1866, and is composed in large measure of the same class of persons. And in this case, unlike that, there are no true Democrats to step into the ranks for GRANT in place of every Republican who goes to GREELEY. We do not make this statement without very satisfactory evidence, and we are willing to stake our political sagacity on the assertion that the election in November will demonstrate the correctness of our view. We are aware that there are crazy-headed Greeleyites, mostly of the Democratic persuasion, who go about prognosticating that Chemung County will give 1,500 majority for this amazingly corrupt and wicked political combination. A wilder or more baseless estimate was never made. Against it we state our conviction that the county will give GRANT a majority of 800. We are fully convinced that seventy-five will cover all the Republicans in the whole City of Elmira who at any time have had any idea of going for GREELEY, and that number will be very materially decreased before the election. We do not speak at random when we say that the vast majority of Democrats will vote for GRANT or refuse to vote at all—they will not vote for GREELEY."

Head-Quarters of the Republican General Committee of this County.

The head-quarters of the Republican County General Committee, north-east corner of Twenty-third-street and Broadway, are excellently well adapted for their purpose. The entire upper floor of the building has been leased and gas is through repair. The large hall, formerly used for theatrical exhibitions, has been painted, the walls papered, and furnished for use at the meetings of the Committee. A stage at the end of the room makes a good platform for speakers. The hall will accommodate nearly a thousand persons. Another large hall is furnished with every requisite for a reading-room, for which it is largely used. A smaller room, and another, handsomely carpeted and furnished, are used for Executive and subcommittee meetings. The Eleventh Assembly District Republican Association and the District Grant and Wilson Club meet here. A mammoth banner is stretched across Broadway in front of the rooms, bearing the names and portraits of GRANT and WILSON, and the legend, "One good term deserves another."

To Mr. Allen and Others.

Some of our contemporaries are evidently anxious to discover why it is that the Times omits so tenaciously the claim of a proportional refund of subscription money, which some of the subscribers have put in, on the very sound plea that the publishers undertook, in distinct terms, to furnish them with a Republican paper, which they have now ceased to do. To refund a few subscriptions would be a small matter, very small in comparison with the preservation of good credit, and the reputation of perfect fairness that would consequently accrue. But the reason for the refusal is clear enough. It is a matter of principle, and also of interest. Let it be once established by a compliance with the demands of the law who have had the pluck to stand up for their rights, and these Greeley subscribers who took a Republican paper, and have paid for it, have a right to their money again, and to substitute another paper for the delinquent Tribune would be to make the Times an accessory in an undertaking to take the money of others, but which is a concert-saloon, dignitary, which is bankrupt and insolvent before a week was over.

The Alliance.

Special Dispatch.

The Springfield Republican is much excited over the accusation made by the NEW-YORK TIMES that HORACE GREELEY has secured the support of the late "Ring" in New-York, by promising them office and power in case of election; in other words, has made himself accessory before the fact to the plunder of the public. As yet it sees no proof of the charge, but believes, should its truth ever be proved, that it would be the duty of every good citizen to vote against GREELEY, and would itself oppose him to the last, in spite of its strongest political predilections. It is sure, as it says, no positive testimony has shown that the Sage has made any direct bargain with the Ring, but the fact that such men as these support a candidate shows that they expect plunder by success; and as no honest man would accept the help of, or associate with such rascals, we think that appearances fully justify the belief that there is at least an understanding between Mr. GREELEY and the ex-thieves. A Reform party, of which the Tammanyites are members, has about as much of the reform feeling in it, as there is love of freedom in a slaver.

What Honest Democrats Think.

A Democrat writes to the New-York Evening Express, protesting against the course of that eccentric sheet in supporting GREELEY. The writer, whose initials are J. A. B., says:

"I am now surprised to find yours with numerous other Democratic journals favoring GREELEY for the Presidency. I regard it as a sign of fearful degeneracy and demoralization. When any member of that grand old party to which I belong, whose creed I have lived by and in whose faith I expect to die, can be used as a scapegoat, to elevate those who are mere place-hunters, caring nothing for its time-honored principles and wise theory of government. Of what benefit would be the change from GRANT to GREELEY?

"If the Express had been candid in its answer to this correspondent, it would have replied to his last question thus: 'The change from GRANT to GREELEY would bring back the Tweed Ring to power, and we are in favor of that change. We never published the figures which proved Tweed's guilt—that was the point on which side our sympathies were placed. We are true to our first love.' J. A. B. might not be entirely satisfied with this answer, but it would have been time, and the answer he really received was not.

Mr. G. Encouraging Where She Calls the "Franking Swindle."

Troy Daily Times.

There was a time when the New-York Tribune objected vehemently to abuses of the franking privilege, but that journal has very little to say on the subject now, the reason for which is, doubtless, that Mr. GREELEY'S Committee at the Astor House recently persuaded Congressman ROOSEVELT to frank a large number of campaign documents, comprising the proceedings of the Cincinnati Convention, a supplement of TILTON'S Golden Age, and an advertisement of Greeley and Brown hats and caps at $15 a set. Five thousand packages of this stuff, with ROOSEVELT'S frank upon each, were stopped at the New-York Post-office one day last week, and sent back to the Committee-room in the Astor House to be properly stamped. A few of them had been sent off before the fraud was discovered. That Mr. GREELEY could have been ignorant that this attempt to cheat the Government was about to be made by his friends is impossible. He spends a portion of every day in the Committee-room, and of course thoroughly posted concerning the work there done in his behalf. What has become of his zeal for reform in the administration of the Post-office Department?

Sensible Views of Sober Southerners.

Letter from a New-Orleans Democratic Merchant.

A New-Orleans business man, who was an officer in the rebel army, wrote recently, as quoted below, in a private letter to a friend in Portland, Maine. The writer is not in any way connected with political affairs, but claims to be a Democrat, having always voted with that party. He says:

"WARMTH is endeavoring to produce a conflict between the blacks and whites—which if successful would result in a war of races. The negroes placed WARMOTH in power, under OSCAR J. DUNN'S leadership and they discovered over-reaching, and as a class are deadedly opposed to him. Hence he desires to create a 'white man's party.' The only salvation for the South is GRANT'S re-election, for there are still those who think that the war is not yet over. They are few in number, however, and GRANT'S re-election will dispel the illusion."

Mr. Greeley's Chances in the Interior of the State.

A prominent politician from the interior of this State arrived here yesterday with fresh and thoroughly reliable information in regard to the political situation in that section. He made a careful canvass of Tompkins County, of which he is an old resident, and found that the Greeley faction was daily declining. The county numbers 4,800 voters, of whom GREELEY will not get more than 300 to support him. Old Democratic leaders in the county admit that GREELEY will get the Baltimore nomination, but say that they will stay away from the polls altogether rather than vote for a man who has always been the bitterest foe of their party. The only Greeley break of any importance among the Republican voters of the county happened at Ithaca, the principal town, where GEORGE W. SCHUYLER, Ex-State Treasurer and Ex-Bank Superintendent, attempted to start a Greeley organization. He was eighty-six names on his roll, but several after-ward repudiated the movement because they were deceived about it. One of the officers subsequently joined the Grant Association and acted as Secretary at a ratification meeting.

In Thoma County the same anti-Greeley feeling was found to exist. One or two efforts were made to create a split in the party which is unanimous for GRANT and WILSON, but they quickly fizzled out from lack of support. In Owego and Camden, the principal towns, Greeley supporters are a rarity.

MORE DUPLICITY REVEALED.

Horace Greeley as the "Alex. Stephens Friend of Henry Clay"—A Reminiscence.

To the Editor of the Cincinnati Commercial:

On receipt of the news by Gen. COMBS and GARRETT DAVIS, of Kentucky, that HORACE GREELEY had been nominated by the Cincinnati Convention as the Liberal candidate for President, they became very much enthused, and greeted the nominee by telegrams that they were never so much rejoiced with the opportunity that their now had of supporting "the life-long friend of HENRY CLAY," and proposed to administer de bene esse on the political remains of Mr. CLAY in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, for the benefit of his life-long friend.

This gushing performance was very natural and becoming in that personal fogy, Gen. COMBS, but was out of keeping with the overcarping and valuble DAVIS, who was, no doubt, moved by that ruling passion, which is said to be strong even in death, his hope for and love of office. In the palmy days of Mr. CLAY his personal magnetism was such that it was a common saying among his devoted friends and admirers, that they would vote for "Old Hal" as long as he lived, and for his executors and legal representatives after his death; hence it is to be inferred, that Messrs. COMBS and DAVIS are now about to endeavor to make a post-mortem organization, which will most undoubtedly only result in a rattling among the dry bones.

It is the merit of this reminiscence, to wit: When the departed Whig Party was about to make its last organized effort, which resulted in the nomination of SCOTT and GRAHAM, the Whigs of Cincinnati, who were somewhat divided in their affections between Judge MCLEAN and Mr. CLAY, called a mass-meeting of the Cincinnati Collisseum, in the summer of 1852. The meeting was organized under the influence of, and by the friends of Judge MCLEAN, who as an old and honored citizen of Cincinnati, was well entitled to the compliment. Among the names of several gentlemen mentioned as for delegates to the Whig National Convention for the Second Congressional District of Mr. E. S. L'HOMMEDIEU, of the Cincinnati Gazette, was by all odds the most popular, and placed as he was more than suspected of being a "life-long friend of Mr. CLAY," he was, nevertheless, almost unanimously nominated. It was only because of his desire to cast his necessary vote for Judge MCLEAN, and thus let HENRY CLAY, and, if necessary, go, continue so to do to the successful end, in all of which Mr. L'HOMMEDIEU gave his assent to stand, by, if, as had to step in the last ditch to do so. Well, Mr. L'HOMMEDIEU, to fulfill his trust, was duly in Philadelphia to the National Convention, and the Sentinel that called on him at his hotel was Mr. HORACE GREELEY, the great original "life-long friend" of Mr. CLAY. Mr. L'HOMMEDIEU supposed, of course, that Mr. GREELEY called to see the inimitable HENRY CLAY, and he offered to introduce him to the gallant Harry of the West; but no, Mr. GREELEY never said CLAY once—he had only used his magic name as a cover for a deceptive fact by which Gen. SCOTT was to be nominated, and the almost comatose Whig Party was to be revivified and organized on a military basis, such in his estimation being a necessary gull to catch the sovereign. He was certain of success in nominating Gen. SCOTT over Mr. CLAY, but he was not very much disgusted, and would fill the Tribune with his lamentations for a week or so, and then be able to cast down the wrath of the "Clay Wings," and in the end bring them all over, with himself, to "SCOTT and the Constitution." The "military" L'HOMMEDIEU, who was a bitter partisan Whig, was over-persuaded, being willing to "go for anybody" to beat the Democracy, satisfied that success in the end would justify him in the estimation of his constituents, to whose wonder and astonishment, in the Convention, he never voted for either Judge MCLEAN or HENRY CLAY. After his return home, Mr. L'HOMMEDIEU, when inquired of by his friends and those of Judge MCLEAN and Mr. CLAY as to the reason for his vote, gave the foregoing as an explanation and defense. In further illustration of Mr. GREELEY'S duplicity of character, he gave several instances of H. G.'s greatness. Had Gen. GRANT handled GREELEY as actively as Mr. LINCOLN did, the Tribune would be an organ yet, and H. G. his faithful henchman.

YELLOW SPRINGS. WISHTON.

THE CAMPAIGN IN THE SOUTH.

Treasonous Men Taking the Field for Grant—What will Probably Follow Greeley's Nomination at Baltimore.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—It is a matter of comment in political circles that twice in the nomination of Mr. GREELEY at Baltimore, which is now considered certain, many prominent and bold men throughout the South have declared for Gen. GRANT, and will undertake active campaigning in the Southern States. Such men as MORRY, for instance, the RUFFIN will not be able to silence. The voices of these leaders will be heard, and, as a consequence, the Republican side of the issue will be set before the people. All parts of the country give favorable reports, and the assurance now felt that the Baltimore Convention will nominate GREELEY is exceedingly gratifying to friends of the Administration.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Mr. JAMES H. NASH has declined the Republican nomination for Elector in the Third District of West Virginia.

There is but one Republican journal of any account in New England that does not support GRANT and WILSON.

Steps have been taken in Chicago to form a social political club, similar to the Union League of this City.

The nomination of Hon. RICHARD D. PARSONS for Congress in the Twentieth District of Ohio is most enthusiastically received by the Republicans.

The Houston (Texas) Telegraph thinks it "wicked" to disqualify JOHN H. REAGAN, a member of the rebel Cabinet, and says if it were not for the fact that he is disqualified he would be sent to Congress.

A San Francisco paper reports that Senator COLE, whose term expires with this Congress, aspires to a renomination for the lower House as member from the San Francisco district. The present member, Mr. SARGENT, has been elected to succeed him in the Senate.

Five days before the sudden change of Col. JOHN L. BURN, of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee, to the Greeley faction, he wrote for publication an article entitled, "The Cincinnati Foundling," in which he said: "Those persons who were primarily responsible for HORACE GREELEY'S candidacy, were the first to repudiate it. It was not legitimate offspring, they said; and they left the luckless bantling to merciless fate."

Local Notes.

The Bohemian Republican Club, Ca. VINECRY, Chairman, and A. BRABBENEC, Secretary, have just passed resolutions adopting the Philadelphia platform and indorsing the nomination of GRANT and WILSON.

Hon. BEN WOOD'S National Democratic Executive Committee assembled last night at No. 30 Union-square. The attendance was very poor. The intense heat prevented the transaction of any business of interest, and caused an early adjournment.

The monthly meeting of the Fourth Assembly District Republican Association held at No. 103 East Broadway last night, was numerously attended. Capt. EUGENE O'SHEA, presided, and resolutions were passed indorsing the nomination of GRANT and WILSON.

A regular monthly meeting of the Republican General Committee of Kings County was held at Washington Hall, over the Post-office, Brooklyn, last evening. Mr. M. P. BEATON occupied the chair. The usual routine business was transacted, and the Committee adjourned.

MICHIGAN.

The Democratic State Convention—Cincinnati Indorsed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

LANSING, Mich., July 2.—The Democratic State Convention assembled at 12 o'clock. About one hundred and ninety delegates were present, composed of old leaders and former office-holders when the Democracy were triumphant in Michigan. The Convention is largely in favor of GREELEY. Judge LITTLEJOHN was elected Chairman. He paid a gloomy tribute to the past record of the Democratic Party, but said that party was of the past and "let the dead past bury its dead." When things more precious by far than human life are at stake, then if the chosen implement is not at hand take the next best thing you can get hold of. In other words, endorse GREELEY at Baltimore. The delegates drove all GREELEY'S cropping one from First District. The following resolutions adopted:

Resolved, That we indorse the principles embodied in the Cincinnati platform.

Resolved, That our delegates at Baltimore be directed to vote as a unit.

The new State Central Committee was appointed, and consists principally of Greeley men.

The Liberal Republican State Central Committee held a meeting today. Ex-Gov. BLAIR, Hon. WM. P. HUNT and others addressed the meeting. A mass convention is appointed to meet at Jackson on the 9th inst.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., July 2.—The Democratic State Convention for the election of delegates to the Baltimore Convention met at 11 o'clock this morning.

H. M. LOOK, of Oakland County, was chosen temporary Chairman. Committees on Credentials and Permanent Organization were appointed, and the Convention took a recess.

At a Conference of the Liberal Republicans a resolution was adopted to call a mass Convention at Jackson on the 9th of July.

Democratic Candidates for Governor at Georgia.

Mr. JOHN H. JAMES, who has announced himself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Georgia, is a banker, and now Mayor of Atlanta. He says that in his opinion Georgia needs a good, sound Administration to relieve the people of heavy taxes. The Democratic primaries in all of the counties have, however, declared in favor of the present Governor, JAMES M. SMITH.

EXIT McCUNN.

The Senate Votes Unanimously for his Removal.

Details of the Voting on the Various Charges—But One of Them Declared to be Not Proven.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 2.—The Senate met at 10 A. M. Nearly all members were present.

Senator D. E. WOOD continued the summary of the Senate proceeding with the counsel Judge MCCUNN with the testimony were present. Argument was decided to proceed, and the counsel for the prosecution—there being no one present for the respondent—were notified that if they desired to be heard, they now had an opportunity.

Mr. PARSONS, of counsel for the prosecution, then proceeded to sum up the case. After pointing out the distinction in this case as compared with others, he criticised the action of Judge MCCUNN'S counsel in leaving the trial after joining issue. Counsel claimed that the testimony was overwhelming in proof of the charges made, and then fully reviewed the testimony introduced.

On his concluding, the Senate went into private consultation.

Just before the conclusion of PARSONS' summing up, Col. DAVIS, of respondent's counsel, appeared in the Chamber, and had a consultation with Judge VAN COTT, of the counsel for prosecution, but he took no part in the proceedings before the Senate.

On reopening the doors the Clerk was directed to read the charges. On reading charge first that of the Judge's action in the case of CLARK vs. BENINGER, the President put the question as follows to each Senator as his name was called:

"Senator, how say you, is the first item of the charge preferred against the accused proven?" Each Senator then rose and said, "proven." The following Senators voted thus: Adams, Allen, Baker, Benedict, Bowen, Chatfield, Cook, Dickinson, Foster, Graham, Harrower, Johnson, Lewis, Lowery, McGowan, Madden, Murphy, Palmer, Perry, Robertson, Sherman, Wagner, Weissman, Winslow, D. P. Wood, J. Wood, Woodin.

Senator LOMB asked to be excused as he had not the opportunity to hear the testimony or read it, therefore he could not vote understandingly. The question was put to the Senate and he was excused. Senators AMES, O'BRIEN and FOLEY are absent, and HARDENBURGH is excused.

The question was then taken on the second charge, the case of CLARK vs. LOWE, and it stood the same as the preceding vote, Mr. MURPHY voting "substantially proven."

The vote on the third charge, ELLIOTT vs. BUCK, DUNCAN, SHERMAN and others, stood the same as the preceding.

The vote on the fourth charge, BRANDON vs. BUCK, DUNCAN, SHERMAN and others, stood the same as the preceding.

The vote on the fifth charge, O'MAHONEY vs. AUGUST BELMONT and others, stood the same as the preceding.

The vote on the sixth charge, HICKS vs. DISHON, stood as follows:

Not proven—Messrs. Adams, Allen, Baker, Bowen, Chatfield, Cook, Dickinson, Foster, Graham, Harrower, Johnson, Lewis, Lowery, McGowan, Murphy, Palmer, Perry, Robinson, Sherman, Wagner, Weissman, Winslow, D. P. Wood, J. Wood, Woodin—22.

Proven—Messrs. Benedict, Johnson, Madden, (substantially,) Tiemann—4.

This item charges the defendant with issuing an order of arrest when the plaintiff had no cause of action, and firing the bail at an excessive and exorbitant amount.

The vote on the seventh charge, VAN NESS vs. LEGNA and others, stood 27 for proven, as before.

The vote on the eighth charge—that the defendant had, by his action, brought the administration of justice into contempt, and caused a deep-seated and general distrust and fear in regard to proceedings in the Courts of the State—was taken, and Messrs. BENEDICT, BOWEN and TIEMANN voted "not proven;" Messrs. MURPHY, PARKER and J. WOODS voted "substantially proven;" D. P. WOOD, "essentially proven," and the remainder of the vote was "proven."

The question was then taken by yeas and nays on the removal of Judge MCCUNN from office, and it was carried, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Allen, Baker, Benedict, Bowen, Chatfield, Cook, Dickinson, Foster, Graham, Harrower, Johnson, Lewis, Lord, Lowery, McGowan, Madden, Murphy, Palmer, Perry, Robertson, Sherman, Wagner, Weissman, Winslow, D. P. Wood, J. Wood, Woodin—29.

JUDGE FRIEDLE'S CASE.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the case of Judge FRIEDLE.

Examiner R. CURTIS was recalled, and detailed the charges imposed upon him in proving a will by Judge FRIEDLE.

Herman RUSSELL gave similar testimony as to the charges imposed in proving another will. She also testified to selling respondent $1,500 in United States bonds, he paying her no premium, though there was a premium on them at the time.

The Senate then took a recess until 4 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 4 P. M., and Mrs. RUSSELL concluded her testimony as to selling bonds to FRIEDLE, he failing to pay her the premium on them. She testified that when she discovered that she had made a foolish bargain, she was so ashamed of it that she did not want to say anything about it to any one, and did not do so for two years.

ALBERT C. LATHAM, connected with the bank in which the bonds were deposited, testified as to the transfer of them to FRIEDLE in his name, and their combined deposit there in his name. Previous to the transfer FRIEDLE came to the bank and fearing that the bonds were there, he asked how much they were worth. He was asked they were worth that day 108 or 109. The bonds remained in the bank to FRIEDLE'S credit from December, 1868 to November, 1869. He then withdrew them.

WARREN NEWTON, Cashier of the bank, testified that he had sold the bonds to BENJAMIN HOOK; they were deposited in the bank until transferred to Judge FRIEDLE; FRIEDLE came to the bank and asked what they were worth; I told him my buying price was $1 06; they were worth in New-York about $1 09; he said he wanted to get some at par, and that price was above his figures; these bonds were worth $1 17 in gold; I told FRIEDLE I would see if I could induce Judge FRIEDLE make an explanation of the transaction, inasmuch he said that he bought the bonds for Ira DRESLER, upon whose property he (FRIEDLE) held a mortgage; he said DRESLER had promised to pay in Government bonds, so he bought them from Mrs. HOOK, as par, for DRESLER to use to pay him.

In cross-examination witness said he had taken an active part in opposition to the re-election of Judge FRIEDLE; his feelings were not very friendly to him; he had secured three affidavits against him; never had said anything learnt about him which was not true; had never said he (witness) was not appointed a commissioner by him he would never be County Judge again.

Witness was asked how long the unpleasant feelings between Judge FRIEDLE and himself had existed, and he could not say exactly how long; the feeling did not grow out of any private matter; he had opposed Judge FRIEDLE until for County Judge, and hence was unfriendly to him.

GEO. C. MASON, who was clerk in the New-York and Midland Railroad office at Norwich in 1867, testified that FRIEDLE came there and exchanged some Government bonds in November, 1866, for Midland bonds; the premium he thought amounted to seventeen or eighteen per cent.

AUSTIN BARROWS testified that Judge FRIEDLE procured or suffered himself to be employed as attorney to bring suit in the Supreme Court to procure an order for the sale of real estate to pay legacies bequeathed by ANNA BARROWS and procured his clerk, GEO. W. RAY, to act as attorney for the defendant in the case.

Counsel for the prosecution propounded a question to the witness concerning another case in which the latter was executor, which was objected to by counsel for respondent, as it was not contained in the charges.

The Senate then went into private consultation on the objections, and on the re-opening of the doors it was announced that the objections were sustained.

JAMES G. THOMPSON, County Clerk of Chenango County, was examined to identify papers issued by Judge FRIEDLE, and other papers signed by the latter, and GEO. W. RAY, FRIEDLE'S clerk, as attorneys for plaintiffs and defendants respectively.

The Senate then adjourned, until 4 A. M. to-morrow.

Fire in Jersey City—Explosion.

At 9 o'clock last night a fire was discovered at SOMERS' oil factory, on Warren and first streets, Jersey City. The men had with concentrated fear left the place, and the origin of the fire is not known. It broke out in the eastern building, and soon caught one of the tanks, which exploded, causing a furious fire. Its spread was, however, prevented by the prompt action of the Fire Department. Lieut. ELIAS RIKER, Jr., a fireman, was covered with the oil from the exploded tank, and badly burned. He was removed to the Hospital.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

A Fresh Survey of State Boundary Lines—The Facts in Regard to Official Attendance—Colored Mechanics' Society.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Several boundary lines between States are to be surveyed, and necessarily determined, under the direction of Gen. HAZEN, Detailed. Thus, land are required to be determined accurately, such only surveyors who are able to determine them will be employed; or, if other parties are employed, they will be compelled to employ assistants qualified to make the necessary observations and computations to make determinations of the character above mentioned.

GENERAL ATTENDANCE.

The Tribune of this morning prints a list of about thirty names of officers who, it charges, are away from their duties here at the present time. Several mentioned in the list are here attending to the business of their offices, and have not been absent except perhaps for a single day. Several others mentioned were called away yesterday on the business of the Government, and are here today or will be to-morrow. Three, at least, have no connection whatever with any of the Departments, or the Executive branch of Government. Scarcely one-third the list are spending any extended vacation away from the City.

A COLORED BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

The branch of the Mechanics' and Laboring Men's Society in this city, an organization for the assistance of colored laborers out of work, or sick, or in destitute circumstances, has raised by subscription in this city during the past few months upward of two thousand dollars, to be expended by the officers of the society here in the district. The Central Executive Committee of the National organization meets in Annapolis in a few days, and this report of the Local Committee here will be laid before them.

GEN. SICKLES AND THE SPANISH GOVERNMENT.

When Gen. SICKLES returned to Spain last Spring, he did not expect to remain there beyond the present month. The Prime Minister, SAGASTA, was hostile to him for various reasons, and if he had remained at the head of the Spanish Ministry Gen. SICKLES' resignation would have been necessary. But the new Minister, ZORILLA, is a far more liberal man, politically, than his predecessor, and his views are much more in accord with those of our Minister, especially in regard to the treatment of Cuba, and he has given himself at once on cordial terms with the General, who will, therefore, remain at Madrid, at least for some time, and continue the conduct of our national business with that Court.

THE CABINET.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The organ of Mr. GREELEY charges that the "President Grant Committee at Washington," as it contemptuously terms it, is using the appliances of the Senate folding-room to wrap up their campaign documents. The articles being put in wrappers were two speeches, one by Senator CARPENTER and the other by Senator SCHURZ. Both pamphlets appeared to be printed from the Globe office, and to have reached the folders in the usual manner. Prospective Changes in the Dominion Cabinet.

TORONTO, July 2.—The Mail, the Government organ in this city, says: "We have reason to believe that several important changes will at once be made in the disposition of officers at Ottawa, the necessity therefor being caused by the appointments of Hon. ALEX. MORRIS as Minister of Inland Revenue, to be Chief Justice of Manitoba, JOHN O'CONNOR, M. A Strike for Ten Hours Threatened in Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., July 2.—The laborers employed in the mills and salt blocks in Saginaw Valley, Mich., threaten to strike to-morrow. They demand a reduction of the hours of labor from twelve to ten hours. The employers express their determination not to submit.

The Printers of Milwaukee Gouged by the Employers—Union Men to be Rigidly Excluded.

MILWAUKEE, July 2.—The printers' strike created greater excitement than any event since the Chicago fire. The newspapers are regularly issued, but show a lean appearance. They have busted the Union completely. The News says the newspapers now take their place as "rat" offices, and adopt the Union nickname. They will pay just as high or higher wages, will be governed by the rules framed as strictly in the interest of the journeymen printers, and will be managed as harmoniously and generously as any Union office are managed, but they will be emancipated from the despotism and terrorism in which they have heretofore been held. They will be governed and conducted that the term "rat office," will be not a reproach or stigma, but it shall indicate that within them, and in the system they represent, neither the employers nor employes are slaves of a petty, irresponsible and fanatical tyranny.

THE EDGAR STEWART.

Our Consul at Aspinwall Persists in Counselling the Vessel—The Captain of the Steamer Submits Voluntarily to the Local Authorities, Who Disarmament His Entire.

ASPINWALL, June 15.—The steamer Edgar Stewart is said to be in the hands of the American Vice-Consul, Mr. DILL, with a guard on board from the United States steam-ship Wyoming, Col. AGENO has published a card attacking the Vice-Consul and Capt. PENNELL of the Edgar Stewart. The Vice-Consul remains firm in the discharge of his duty, and Capt. PENNELL stays on board the steamer, as the Cubans threaten to kill him if he comes on shore. He has failed to find a purchaser for part of the arms, and has no means for shipping a crew. The Edgar Stewart will probably be sent to the United States, in charge of a detachment from the Wyoming. The native authorities persist in demanding the surrender of the vessel to them, and the appearance of Capt. PENNELL before their Court, but the United States Vice-Consul will await instructions from Washington before complying with the demand.

ASPINWALL, June 22.—Capt. PENNELL of the steamer Edgar Stewart, has, on the persuasion of President CORREOSO, of his own accord, submitted to a formal arrest for twenty-four hours, in order to vindicate the dignity of the State authorities, whose summons he has hitherto refused to obey. His safety and honorable release was guaranteed by the President. There is no change in the Edgar Stewart affair. Vice-Consul DILL is firm as a rock, and is backed by Capt. DAVIS, of the United States steamer Wyoming.

THE FISK MURDER.

The Question of the Medical Treatment—Effect of the Probing—The Stimulants Administered—The Real Cause of Death.

The trial of EDWARD S. STOKES, for the killing of JAMES FISK, JR., was resumed yesterday before Judge INGRAHAM, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. The prosecution was represented by District-Attorney GARVIN, assisted by the private counsel, Messrs. BEACH and FULLERTON, and the prisoner was defended by Messrs. TRUMAIN, MCKEON, DAILEY, Jr., and TOWNSEND.

The first witness called was Dr. JOHN F. P. WHITE, of No. 31 West Twenty-third-street. He testified in reply to Mr. GARVIN: I am a physician, and attended Col. FISK for about four years past; I attended him for a slight attack of bilious colic about a week before the assassination; about five o'clock on the afternoon of the 6th of January, 1872, I was summoned to Room No. 12 of the Grand Central Hotel, where Col. FISK was lying; he was on his bed, attended by his physicians, who were examining the wound; I inserted the probe after Dr. WOOD; the entrance was about three or four inches, when it met with a resistance; I withdrew the probe and applied to the other surgeons, and having withdrawn the probe used disinfectant injections; I made no further examination, but I ascertained from a table upon which the bullet; the pulse at that time was seventy-four, and the respiration a little weak, but nothing irregular. After clearing out the room we withdrew for consultation, when we determined upon the manner of treatment, and the time for the distribution of the work. I went in and out of the room from about half-past five o'clock until 8 o'clock, when I returned at nine o'clock, when I learned that SAYRES had been sent for at the request of one of the friends of Col. FISK. At nine the pulse was 78 and the skin moist; I applied a poultice to the abdomen; I returned at eleven o'clock to meet in consultation with Drs. SAYRES, WOOD, TRIPLER, FIRBER and STEELE. We had some conversation with our patient and he answered all our questions with readiness. His pulse was then 120, and respiration twenty-two; at 11 o'clock the patient complained of pain; I made no further examination, but I ascertained from a table upon which the bullet was lying that it had not been moved; the pulse at that time was seventy-four, and the respiration a little weak; I applied that I met the bullet; the pulse at that time was seventy-four, and the respiration a little weak, but nothing irregular. After clearing out the room we withdrew for consultation, when we determined upon the manner of treatment, and the time for the distribution of the work. I went in and out of the room from about half-past five o'clock until 8 o'clock, when I returned at nine o'clock, when I learned that SAYRES had been sent for at the request of one of the friends of Col. FISK. At nine the pulse was 78 and the skin moist; I applied a poultice to the abdomen; the consultation lasted from 11 o'clock to 1 o'clock; I went home and returned again at four o'clock in the morning; I stood at the foot of the bed, and FISK opened his eyes and nodded to me; I asked him how he felt, and he said he was very tired; I then gave him some water, and he fell asleep again; at four o'clock his pulse was 128, and respiration twenty-two; at half-past eight pulse was 130, respiration eighteen, and skin moist; at 9 o'clock the pulse was 140; at 10 minutes to eleven the day after he received the injuries, and I saw him about an hour subsequently.

Q.—Describe to the Jury if you were present at the time of death! A.—Dr. MAYER performed the operation; the wound in the arm I can't describe very minutely, but the wound in the abdomen passed obliquely on the right side of the navel, the navel being one-half inch from the median line, and downwards for about four inches, where it entered the abdomen, and there was an appearance of clotted blood on the abdomen; I then passed through the mesentery and the small intestines, and finally intercepted the ball passed out the cavity of the peritoneum and lodged in the thigh bone.

Q.—Did it was the cause of death! A.—Death was produced by the bullet; in the other wound the ball passed clearly through the arm.

Cross-examined by Mr. TOWNSEND—It was about twenty minutes past five o'clock when I saw Col. FISK; the shock of the injuries I have already mentioned and a few private gentlemen were in the room when I called; I did not see any ladies in the room; in all there might be from fifteen to twenty; I was there when Dr. WOOD; I was DR. WHITE; I was there when I first saw Col. FISK; I was there when the bullet was extracted; I think he could stand that is had not taken effect, and wanted more, but I told him to wait a short time; no, not for the effects; he had also had stimulants.

Q.—Is not good treatment to give opium and other plants, not! A.—Yes; ninety drops of opium; I don't know; I don't think it is; I don't know; I administered all the same; the tincture of opium; 100 drops at a time; the tincture of opium; Dr. WOOD; I administered it; I don't know; I don't think it would do any harm.

Q.—Would it not be better for the probing! A.—I did not.

Q.—Would the introduction of a probe short three inches and a half, if it did not enter the body, do any harm! A.—I should think not, if it did not enter the body; I probed between eleven and twelve o'clock; I see him, he had been asleep, but was easy to wake; I was particular in examining his eyes; it was normal at that time; that proves that the opium had no deleterious effects upon his system; the and the ability to rouse him; I saw him next morning between eight and nine o'clock; he was then rapidly sinking; at the post-mortem the ball was found to have taken exactly the direction I had expected, and it would have gone out just where I expected, but that it was stopped by the hip bone.

Q.—What was the cause of death! A.—I think he died from shock; he had some slight peritonitis in the lower portion of the abdomen, but he had not been wounded long enough to have severe acute peritonitis; I have not fully laid from the impression of the shock; the great sympathetic nerve was injured; the shock was greater than the wound in its effects by reason of its impression upon the nerves.

Q.—Give your definition of shock! A.—It is an impression made upon the nervous system by some severe injury.

Q.—From the time you considered this wound mortal, did your treatment could save him! A.—Yes, and therefore I told them to make him comfortable and let him die easy.

Cross-examined by Mr. TOWNSEND—If the pellet I observed had resulted from loss of blood, the case would not have been so grave; but when you get such an impression as that made upon the nervous system, there is a damage which makes it very great danger can never be repaired; when I first saw Col. FISK he complained of the pain in his stomach; he was quite humorous, and said it was "like apple belly-ache."

Q.—You told him to have his will drawn—now would that have a good effect on a person suffering from shock! would it not help to disturb his shattered nerves! A.—I think when a person in this condition has done his duty in settling his affairs, he is more likely to feel comfortable in his mind; that is what I always act; I think it has a better influence on the mind.

Q.—Then you think it right to tell a person in this condition of shock that he had better make his will, as he is going to die! A.—It is in done judiciously I think it is very right and proper to do so.

Q.—You think ten drops of opium would be a proper dose under some circumstances! A.—Certainly.

Q.—Would it make any difference if it were given subcutaneously! A.—Its operation would be quicker; if you give it the usual way, in the stomach, it has time to embrace the blood vessels of digestion; if it is injected under the skin it comes directly into the circulation, and so begins to operate in a very low condition; besides that you get rid of the possible unpleasant and all the injurious effects of the drug.

Q.—At what period of the day was this? A.—Yes; that proved the opinion had no determinate effects; at six o'clock in the morning I found him sinking—that was indicated by his pulse and respiration; there is no evidence of after death by shock, but opium can be detected by chemical analysis.

TESTIMONY OF THE POLICE SURGEON.

Dr. THEOPHILUS STEELE, a Police Surgeon, sworn.

District-Attorney GARVIN—Q.—Did you see Mr. FISK after he was shot! A.—I did; I arrived there about six o'clock in the afternoon of the day he was shot; Dr. JAMES R. WOOD and Dr. FISHER, SAYRE and TRIPLER were present, and Dr. WOOD was probing the wound in the abdomen; I did not examine the wound myself; I saw the ball; I saw it about fifteen minutes before eleven o'clock that night; he appeared to have recovered somewhat; the temperature of his skin was better; his pulse; was about eighty-six and his respiration from twenty-eight to twenty-nine; he was rational; I saw him again about twelve o'clock; there was no change; he appeared more quiet; at a quarter before eleven a dose of morphine was administered to him; it was given at his own solicitation and by the advice of Drs. WOOD, WHITE, FISHER and myself; I saw him again the next morning, about half-past eight; he was then in a dying condition; I was present at the post-mortem examination, but did not see accurately anything that was done.

Mr. TOWNSEND—Are you a physician or surgeon! A.—I am both; have been in practice in New-York since the Fall of 1863; I went to see Mr. FISK in response to a call from the Fifteenth Precinct Station-house; Dr. WOOD introduced the probe about three and a half inches; I noticed particularly the excessively pallid condition of Mr. FISK's face.

Q.—Did you know he had been ill during the week previous! A.—I did not.

Q.—In cases of shock, is not the color of the skin rather grayish than whitish! A.—It is an ashy whiteness; I noticed also a marked discoloration which indicated no sudden death would be the result.

Q.—What is your opinion as to the use of probes in wounds in the abdomen made by bullets! A.—I think they are useful to trace the direction and ascertain if the bullet has inflicted a dangerous wound.

Q.—Had you known Col. FISK before! A.—I had met him socially, but had never attended him medically.

Q.—Did the doctors hold a consultation after the death of Mr. FISK! A.—I called at Dr. WOOD's office at Dr. TRIPLER's request.

Q.—Was the general history of the case gone over at that time! A.—There were no detailed statements made.

Q.—Was any question raised in regard to the opium used! A.—I think it was mentioned; the newspapers tried to prove that we had killed him.

Q.—At that subsequent interview was anything said in regard to probing! A.—Nothing, except Dr. TRIPLER stated that he probed the wound in the abdomen.

District-Attorney GARVIN—What is your opinion was the cause of death! A.—Shock produced by the wounds.

TESTIMONY OF DR. THOMAS H. TRIPLER.

Dr. THOMAS H. TRIPLER, sworn.

District-Attorney GARVIN—Q.—Were you called to see Mr. FISK after he was wounded! A.—Yes, sir; I arrived there about twenty minutes after four o'clock; he was then standing in room No. 212, near the door, with his coat off; his left shirt-sleeve was stained with blood; I asked what was the matter, and he replied, "I have been shot;" I then removed his cuffs, and cut off a portion of his shirt-sleeve to examine the wound in the arm; after bandaging that wound I laid him upon the bed to examine the wound in his abdomen, which I probed to the half an inch in diameter; I passed in a probe about three and one-half inches, and found that the direction of the wound was downward slightly backward; I then had his head raised from the bed; he died five seconds after, and Dr. WOOD probed for the pellet; before the other doctors arrived, the pale medicine I administered was about two ounces of brandy with twenty drops of laudanum; the treatment I administered by advice of Drs. WOOD, WHITE, FISHER and myself; I saw him again the next morning, about half-past eight; he was then in a dying condition; I was present at the post-mortem examination, but did not see accurately anything that was done.

TESTIMONY OF DR. LOUIS A. SAYRE.

Dr. LOUIS A. SAYRE was then called and examined by Mr. GARVIN: I am a graduate, I am a member of the medical profession for thirty-two years; I am one of the medical faculty of Bellevue Hospital; I have seen a good deal of practice in surgery; I was called to see Col. FISK about nine o'clock in the evening; he was lying on his back on the bed, with his left hand on the pillow, breath was in the upper part of the stomach-ache; he said, "If I could only get rid of this, then I would be all right;" I proceeded to examine the wound in the arm, as it was a slight flesh wound, and there was trouble from it; I then examined a wound in the abdomen, five or six inches above the umbilicus and about two and a half inches to the right, descending downward and outward toward the left hip; from the description of the person who was present when I examined the staircase, and his statement of where the person stood who fired the shot, and where Col. FISK stood when he was shot, I presumed the shot would take its course in the left hip; I therefore examined Col. FISK there, expecting to find the hole where the shot came out, but finding none, I made no further examination; he was perfectly cool and connected in his mind; there was a slight pallor on his face, showing that he had suffered a great shock; his pulse was very frequent—74 or 76; there was no indication of internal hemorrhage; therefore, from the fact of his extreme pallor, I was afraid that he was going to die from shock—that the shock to his nervous system was such that he was going to die; knowing the necessity to shock that his affairs should as he had a very clear composition, but I was mistaken; I was mistaken, that there was paralysis of the nervous surface of the body, and that the capillary circulation had ceased; I therefore told him I thought he had better send for his lawyer and settle up his affairs; I think that is proper, much the only prescription I made for him; I saw him again between seven and twelve that night; I think I gave no particular directions; I did not see any ladies in the room; in all there might be from fifteen to twenty; I was there when Dr. WOOD; I was DR. WHITE; I was there when the bullet was extracted; I think he could stand that is had not taken effect, and wanted more, but I told him to wait a short time; no, not for the effects; he had also had stimulants.

Cross-examined by Mr. TOWNSEND—If the pellet I observed had resulted from loss of blood, the case would not have been so grave; but when you get such an impression as that made upon the nervous system, there is a damage which makes it very great danger can never be repaired; when I first saw Col. FISK he complained of the pain in his stomach; he was quite humorous, and said it was "like apple belly-ache."

Q.—You told him to have his will drawn—now would that have a good effect on a person suffering from shock! would it not help to disturb his shattered nerves! A.—I think when a person in this condition has done his duty in settling his affairs, he is more likely to feel comfortable in his mind; that is what I always act; I think it has a better influence on the mind.

Q.—Then you think it right to tell a person in this condition of shock that he had better make his will, as he is going to die! A.—It is in done judiciously I think it is very right and proper to do so.

Q.—You think ten drops of opium would be a proper dose under some circumstances! A.—Certainly.

Q.—Would it make any difference if it were given subcutaneously! A.—Its operation would be quicker; if you give it the usual way, in the stomach, it has time to embrace the blood vessels of digestion; if it is injected under the skin it comes directly into the circulation, and so begins to operate in a very low condition; besides that you get rid of the possible unpleasant and all the injurious effects of the drug.

Q.—At what period of the day was this? A.—Yes; that proved the opinion had no determinate effects; at six o'clock in the morning I found him sinking—that was indicated by his pulse and respiration; there is no evidence of after death by shock, but opium can be detected by chemical analysis.

TESTIMONY OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ERIE ROAD.

GEORGE H. SHIRK, Superintendent of the Erie Railroad, Providence, R.I., sworn.

Mr. MCKEON—Is there an association called the National Association for the Promotion of the Interests of the American Trotting Club! A.—There is.

Q.—Who is the President! A.—AMASA SPRAGUE, of Providence, and I am the Secretary and Treasurer.

Q.—Do you recollect of meeting of the Board of Appeals of that Society which was held on the 17th of last December, at the Everett House, in this City! A.—I do.

Q.—Who were present! A.—Mr. SPRAGUE and myself; Mr. BARNARD, of Troy; Mr. BARRE, of Detroit; Mr. RUSSELL, of Boston, and others.

Q.—What is the object of that Association! A.—To improve the Trotting Club and stop rascality on the turf.

Q.—To improve the breed of horses!

Mr. BEACH—No, no, to improve the breed of men.

Q.—Was STORES present at that meeting! A.—He was, and presented a case in dispute between himself and a Mr. SMITH.

Q.—Was it heard! A.—It was not; it was put over until the next meeting, as there had not been sufficient notice given to the party of whom he complained.

Q.—After that did anything pass between you and STOKES! Yes, Sir, papers and affidavits relating to the case, which are now in my possession.

Mr. MCKEON here offered in evidence a copy of the proceedings of the Board of Appeals at a meeting held on the 9th of last January, containing an account of STOKES' case, which the witness said was a correct copy.

TESTIMONY OF DR. LOUIS A. SAYRE.

Dr. LOUIS A. SAYRE was then called and examined by Mr. GARVIN: I am a graduate, I am a member of the medical profession for thirty-two years; I am one of the medical faculty of Bellevue Hospital; I have seen a good deal of practice in surgery; I was called to see Col. FISK about nine o'clock in the evening; he was lying on his back on the bed, with his left hand on the pillow, breath was in the upper part of the stomach-ache; he said, "If I could only get rid of this, then I would be all right;" I proceeded to examine the wound in the arm, as it was a slight flesh wound, and there was trouble from it; I then examined a wound in the abdomen, five or six inches above the umbilicus and about two and a half inches to the right, descending downward and outward toward the left hip; from the description of the person who was present when I examined the staircase, and his statement of where the person stood who fired the shot, and where Col. FISK stood when he was shot, I presumed the shot would take its course in the left hip; I therefore examined Col. FISK there, expecting to find the hole where the shot came out, but finding none, I made no further examination; he was perfectly cool and connected in his mind; there was a slight pallor on his face, showing that he had suffered a great shock; his pulse was very frequent—74 or 76; there was no indication of internal hemorrhage; therefore, from the fact of his extreme pallor, I was afraid that he was going to die from shock—that the shock to his nervous system was such that he was going to die; knowing the necessity to shock that his affairs should as he had a very clear composition, but I was mistaken; I was mistaken, that there was paralysis of the nervous surface of the body, and that the capillary circulation had ceased; I therefore told him I thought he had better send for his lawyer and settle up his affairs; I think that is proper, much the only prescription I made for him; I saw him again between seven and twelve that night; I think I gave no particular directions; I did not see any ladies in the room; in all there might be from fifteen to twenty; I was there when Dr. WOOD; I was DR. WHITE; I was there when the bullet was extracted; I think he could stand that is had not taken effect, and wanted more, but I told him to wait a short time; no, not for the effects; he had also had stimulants.

Q.—Is not good treatment to give opium and other plants, not! A.—Yes; ninety drops of opium; I don't know; I don't think it is; I don't know; I administered all the same; the tincture of opium; 100 drops at a time; the tincture of opium; Dr. WOOD; I administered it; I don't know; I don't think it would do any harm.

Q.—Would it not be better for the probing! A.—I did not.

Q.—Would the introduction of a probe short three inches and a half, if it did not enter the body, do any harm! A.—I should think not, if it did not enter the body; I probed between eleven and twelve o'clock; I see him, he had been asleep, but was easy to wake; I was particular in examining his eyes; it was normal at that time; that proves that the opium had no deleterious effects upon his system; the and the ability to rouse him; I saw him next morning between eight and nine o'clock; he was then rapidly sinking; at the post-mortem the ball was found to have taken exactly the direction I had expected, and it would have gone out just where I expected, but that it was stopped by the hip bone.

Q.—What was the cause of death! A.—I think he died from shock; he had some slight peritonitis in the lower portion of the abdomen, but he had not been wounded long enough to have severe acute peritonitis; I have not fully laid from the impression of the shock; the great sympathetic nerve was injured; the shock was greater than the wound in its effects by reason of its impression upon the nerves.

Q.—Give your definition of shock! A.—It is an impression made upon the nervous system by some severe injury.

Q.—From the time you considered this wound mortal, did your treatment could save him! A.—Yes, and therefore I told them to make him comfortable and let him die easy.

Cross-examined by Mr. TOWNSEND—If the pellet I observed had resulted from loss of blood, the case would not have been so grave; but when you get such an impression as that made upon the nervous system, there is a damage which makes it very great danger can never be repaired; when I first saw Col. FISK he complained of the pain in his stomach; he was quite humorous, and said it was "like apple belly-ache."

Q.—You told him to have his will drawn—now would that have a good effect on a person suffering from shock! would it not help to disturb his shattered nerves! A.—I think when a person in this condition has done his duty in settling his affairs, he is more likely to feel comfortable in his mind; that is what I always act; I think it has a better influence on the mind.

Q.—Then you think it right to tell a person in this condition of shock that he had better make his will, as he is going to die! A.—It is in done judiciously I think it is very right and proper to do so.

Q.—You think ten drops of opium would be a proper dose under some circumstances! A.—Certainly.

Q.—Would it make any difference if it were given subcutaneously! A.—Its operation would be quicker; if you give it the usual way, in the stomach, it has time to embrace the blood vessels of digestion; if it is injected under the skin it comes directly into the circulation, and so begins to operate in a very low condition; besides that you get rid of the possible unpleasant and all the injurious effects of the drug.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

[illegible]

The Board of Public Works met yesterday, when the following business was transacted: [illegible] Commissioner of Public Works, [illegible] OLMSTED, President of the Department of Public Parks.

The following claims were presented and laid over:

[illegible]

The following were ordered to be paid:

[illegible]

The Controller was about to present a resolution to order the payment of these amounts, whereupon on motion of Commissioner VAN NORT action upon them was deferred until 11 o'clock to-morrow in order to give the proprietors of the newspapers named an opportunity to be present and make any objection, if they may wish.

The Board then adjourned.

Meeting of the Sinking Fund Commissioners.

The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund met yesterday, in the Comptroller's office, Mayor HALL presiding. Comptroller GREEN announced the receipt of a communication from the Department of Docks requesting that a meeting of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund be held to examine plans, etc., for the improvement of the water front from Peck Slip to Burrill Creek, in Grand-street on the East River. The communication was laid on the table.

The Mayor then offered a resolution, that upon the Board of Five Commissioners filling with the Comptroller a certificate of their interest in the Ann-street market-house, the Controller be authorized to sell the same, with the ground on which it stands, at public auction, the conditions of sale to be sixty per cent. cash and sixty per cent. on bond and mortgage, at seven per cent; for five years, the sale to be within thirty days from date of advertisement. The resolution was adopted.

A requisition by the Controller, in a further communication from the Department of Docks, for $750,000, the proceeds of dock bonds, disposed of June 11, 1872, was referred to be concentrated with the requisition of the Sinking Fund, as provided by law.

The Comptroller read a letter of resignation from BERNARD KIELY, as appraiser, appointed to fix the value of premises mentioned and described in a lease dated July 1, 1860, between the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and the New-York and Erie Railway Company.

The resignation was accepted, and the power of appointing a successor vested in the Comptroller.

New-York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

The directors of the New-York Eye and Ear Infirmary, in view of recent improvements in their building, respectfully call attention to the importance of the cases of disease to which the institution is devoted, and to the great facilities they offer for the prompt and skillful and gratuitous treatment. For more than fifty years they have been carrying on this work, by the agency of eminent and able medical men, and supported by funds in part given by the State, but in chief measure derived from the liberality of private individuals. The institution combines the features both of a dispensary and a hospital. As a dispensary, it now receives annually nearly 9,000 patients, while in 1871 it received as in-door patients 443 persons.

It is to the accommodations afforded for treatment of cases who are taken into the building and kept there, that attention is invited. The proportion of cases of diseases of the eye which demand proper hospital care is much larger than is generally supposed. They are nearly all those which require the performance of operations, such as cataract and many forms of serious inflammation of the eye. In the treatment of cataract success depends greatly on suitable care after the operation, as well as upon skill in its performance. The brilliant success of recent times in the treatment of many of the graver forms of disease of the eye is due to the introduction of operations. Such diseases as acute glaucoma, suppurative keratitis, sympathetic inflammations of the eye, chronic iritis, and others, are now controlled with far more certainty than formerly, because, besides using specifical remedies, surgical operations can be performed, which cut short, or favorably modify, the diseased process. For all these cases hospital accommodations are indispensable.

During the last two years another story has been put upon the building, and the rooms have been fitted for the better accommodation of patients. There are now about sixty beds in the institution.

The directors desire to have it distinctly understood that no fees are ever received by the surgeons as their own perquisite for services done at the Infirmary. The institution is purely a public charity, and its benefits are open to the poor and to them alone. Persons who are not absolute paupers, and who desire to make such compensation as they can for professional attendance, are invited to do so, and the money they pay is put into the treasury of the Infirmary. The pecuniary value of the services which have been freely given to the institution by its medical men, is beyond calculation and beyond praise.

The only expense of patients is for board, at the rate of $5 per week. Special cases, unable to pay at all, received free. Of the 443 patients kept in the institution last year, 278 were maintained entirely free of expense to themselves. The directors desire to enlarge as much as possible the usefulness of the institution toward this class of patients. They expended in 1871, $3,407 in paying the board of free patients. They are willing to incur a larger expenditure on behalf of the curable blind.

As an evidence of their earnestness in this matter, it may be stated, that lately one of the directors, who was for many years an active surgeon of the Infirmary, has contributed $4,000 to found a perpetual free bed.

With accommodations amply suited to care for the indigent victims of eye and ear diseases, with funds at their command adequate to all demands which have yet been made upon them, and willing to trust to the liberality of the community to sustain them in greater expenditure, and having a corps of skillful and faithful surgeons to do the work, they open the doors of the Infirmary to all the poor who suffer from diseases of the eye and ear. They are so fully impressed with the importance of the good work for which they have control, and of the ability of the institution to give to the suffering blind and deaf the best care and skill, that they take this means of calling attention to the labors and usefulness of the New-York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Patients are received from all parts of the United States as well as from the City. Its location is at the corner of Second-avenue and Twenty-third-street, and horse-cars run past the door.

Contributions to its funds may be sent to CLINTON GILBERT, Esq., Treasurer, No. 23 Sixth-avenue, New-York.

Business in the Court of General Sessions.

The July Term of the Court of General Sessions was commenced yesterday. At 11 o'clock the Grand Jury took their seats and were briefly addressed by Recorder HACKETT, who called their attention to the increase of crime, which rendered necessary the sitting of a second term of the Court during the present year. There are now 128 complaints awaiting the action of the jury, and after promising them all assistance in disposing of the business before them, he sent them to their chamber, adjourning if they so desired, they could take a recess until Wednesday next. FRANCE.

The Summer Session in the Chamber—A Look at Wandering Finance—Lenoir of the Assembly—M. Favre's Troubles.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Wednesday, June 19, 1872.

After being unusually backward Summer has burst upon us with all its fury, and the sudden change has made the past three days almost unendurable. Since Saturday last the heat has been intense. People are hurrying out of town as rapidly as possible, and at the hour of every train carriages of trunks and boxes testify that the Summer exodus has begun. It is a sad sweet sorrow that very few houses have been taken at the fashionable watering-places, which are in a state of decomposition every hour during warm every country villa within sixty or a hundred miles of Paris has been hunted up and taken. Facilities which have been accorded of late to the masses at Vichy, Trouville, or Biarritz for a series of years past, are now quietly installed in country houses, or in small villages where a party of friends can easily unite. On the score of health this is preferable, perhaps, but unfortunately it will not last. People may be content to eat figs at Tusculum for a single season, but the temptations of Lucullus will be ever before their eyes, and they will promise all sorts of economies this Winter to come in the hope of seeing the more fashionable resorts an other year.

A LACK OF WATERING-PLACES.

One of the main drawbacks to Paris is that there are no watering-places within easy distances of the city. The fashionable resorts in the Pyrenees are too far away, and Vichy is both too far and too costly for the mass of summer tourists. An attempt was made to establish baths at Enghien, half an hour's ride from the city, but that village was badly damaged by the war, and its sulphur water is not generally relished. Saint Cloud, Meudon and the other villages in the environs are decidedly enough, and it is tolerably certain that nothing but Hamburg play at public gamming-tables will be able to restore them. This project is now under discussion. Two hundred millions have been offered for this privilege—a fine sum, be it remarked—and the only hesitation is on account of moral scruples. For my part, I do not see why it is more immoral for me to bet upon "black" or the "eagle-bird" than upon Cassagnac or Ernest Ollivier, or why I should be condemned for taking a chance at Longchamps rather than to pay one of the numerous lotteries authorized by the State. But all some people think differently, M. THIERS is trying to weigh opinions, and the Assembly will vote his proposition, whatever it is. I notice that foreigners find increasing favor in towns where play is authorized, and so far as creditable to them it public gaming is concerned, Baden-Baden is already filling rapidly, and promises a brilliant season. Nearly all American guns are going there. Among the inducements offered are several pigeon-shooting matches, and a series of concerts given by the famous JOHN STRAUSS.

LEADERS OF THE ASSEMBLY.

Owing to the heat, probably, the debates in the Assembly seem languid, tame and unprofitable. The Military bill is yet under discussion and drags along tediously, but a great deal of time could be saved by voting it at once. Everyone knows that M. THIERS has made up his mind to have this law, and that it must be voted sooner or later without any important alterations. Yet, some minor points can be changed, so long as the purport of the law is not altered, and a series of battles is being delivered upon mere verbiage, which affects in no way the general result. Saturday is the day devoted to the "sacred right of petition." This right of petition reminds me of the man who was asked if there was any hunting in his section of the country. "Plenty of it," he replied, "you can hunt all day long, but you'll never find any game." Every Frenchman has the right of petition, but that is all the good it does him, for it is only when the petitions come from the members of the Assembly, or are instigated by them, that any attention is paid to them. The formula is always the same: "The Sieur X—— petitions the Assembly, &c. The Committee find that it is not necessary to prolong the question, and, therefore, move that the Assembly pass to the order of the day." If no voice is raised in the negative the vote is considered as taken; if a voice is raised, some one moves that the matter be referred to a certain Ministry—either the Ministry of War or that of the Interior. This ceremony takes place on Saturday, and hence the debate on the question of "substitution" in the army was deferred until today, and is going on as I write.

M. FAVRE'S TROUBLES.

M. JULES FAVRE is again in trouble, and it must be confessed that the want of common honesty shown by this person removes all sympathy for him. TROCHU has the merit of being an honest man, and however much he errs one may feel sure that he acts conscientiously. M. FAVRE was the only man who denounced an Armistice, and when brought up about it, he declared that "he always suspected Mr. WASHB

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

[illegible]

TUESDAY, July 2—P. M.

The oppressive heat again interfered materially with business in Wall-street, particularly on the Stock Exchange, where the transactions in Stocks and Bonds were fewer and lighter in amount than for some time past. The same dullness prevailed in the Offices of the Bankers dealing in the Public Funds of the United States and in Gold. The price of Gold yielded 1-8@¼ ⅌ cent. from yesterday's sales, most of the business being done at 112¾ ⅌ cent. The export demand is reported lighter than expected because of a sudden weakness in Exchange at the extreme rates. The business today in 60 days London was at 109¾@109⅞ ⅌ cent.

The little that is done in Money loans, among the Brokers, is at 4@5 ⅌ cent. per annum.

The Stock Exchange this Afternoon modified the hours of meeting and of adjournment during the remainder of the Holiday Week. To-morrow, Wednesday, the Exchange will close at 2 o'clock P. M. until 12 o'clock noon on Friday. On Saturday the Exchange will close at 2 o'clock P. M.

The Treasury proposed to buy $1,000,000 United States 5-20s for the Sinking Fund, today, at noon, in place of Wednesday. The offerings were only $328,350, of which $300,850 were accepted as within the price of Gold. To-morrow the Treasury will sell $1,000,000, in place of Thursday, the Holiday.

In the Public Funds, at private sale, there was not much done. Prices are firm, but the offerings of nearly all descriptions are lighter than for several months past. In the Railroad Bonds and in the Shares usually speculated in at the Exchange, it will be noticed, from the official list, that the business was small. The Brokers were well tired of the Exchange-room before 4 o'clock, the hour of adjournment, and made the following quotations as compared with Monday Afternoon:

The interest coupons on the Registered Bonds is paid with GOLD CHECKS, sent to the post-office address of the holder.

☞ A SAFE INVESTMENT FOR TRUST FUNDS.
THE MIDLAND PACIFIC RAILWAY FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

This road is entirely completed and in full operation between the Missouri River and Lincoln, the capital of the State of Nebraska, and is earning more than all its expenses, including interest on its bonds, while its traffic is constantly and rapidly increasing. The line has been built wholly by stock subscriptions, and among its stockholders are some of the most successful railway supporters and financiers in the country. The cost of the road, with its Franchises, Real Estate, Equipments, Telegraph Lines, &c., has been $43,333 per mile, while the mortgage on it is but $19,333, making the Company's securities safe beyond contingency.

The Midland Pacific will connect with the Union Pacific on the west, and on the east with direct lines to the Atlantic Coast and all intermediate centres. Its location is therefore a most important and commanding one, it being the central link of a new trunk route, shortening the distance to the Pacific by 147 miles. As a local enterprise, the Midland Pacific is invaluable. It traverses a fertile tract of country, one of the finest agricultural regions in the Union, and is the main feeder of a rapidly-increasing population. We have examined personally this entire enterprise, and recognize its importance and value, and confidently recommend its Bonds to investors.

During the past few years we have negotiated a large number of railway loans, and there is not one of these roads whose property does not exceed in value, by 100 per cent. the amount of its first mortgage bonds. Present price of Midland Pacifics, 90 and accrued interest. Bonds may be registered without charge, and all marketable securities taken in exchange at fair rates.

FRUIT.—Trade in foreign fruit has been confined to small lots, within range of prices ruling. We quote: Layer Raisins at $3 50@$3 60 ⅌ box; Valencia Raisins, 12c.; Currants, 12c.@7½c.; Almonds, 18c.@20c.; Figs, 12c.@18c.; Turkey Figs, 8c.@14c.; Smyrna Figs, 17c.@18c.; Dates, 7c.@12c.; Filberts, 11c.@12c.; Walnuts, 12c.; Canton Ginger, 22c.@25c.; Preserved Ginger, 35c.@40c., currency, ⅌ quarter-box.

GRAIN.—There has been less call for Spring Wheat, prices of which have again declined 1c.@2c. ⅌ bushel, on the offerings, for prompt and forward delivery. The inquiry has been almost wholly from export buyers. Winter Wheat has been unusually dull, with prices quite nominal. No sales have been reported since our last of 54,000 bushels of Red, per steamer Illinois, at [illegible]c. for No. 2 Milwaukee Spring, afloat; $1 53 for prime No. 2 Spring, per canal, and another lot, 40,000 bushels of a mixed of No. 2 Chicago Spring, in store; $1 60@$1 72½ (nominally) for red, and amber Winter Western; and $1 70@$1 75 for white do....Corn has been in better request for export, and prices have ruled particularly steady for good to choice grades, which have been quite scarce, and strongly advocated by shippers mainly for export. Sales have been reported since our last of 175,000 bushels Western Mixed, afloat, at 62½c. for ordinary to prime steamer grades of new crop, and 63c. for fair to prime sailing grades, and 63½c. for fair to prime steamer grades, afloat, and 64c. for fair to prime sailing grades, afloat. HAY.—Shipping Hay has been weak as to price, and a limited range of from $1 15@$1 20 for shipping, and as much as $1 25 for prime, per 100 lbs., Clover Hay, from 90c. to $1 05. Straw has been inactive at from 60c.@$1 10 for Long Rye, and from 60c.@$1 05 for Long Oat, per 100 lbs.

METALS.—Trade in most articles has been on a very moderate scale, and we have only noted material changes in values, in the leading instances....Of Ingot Copper, 1,000 bbls. Manufactured Whale and Sperm Oils, but quoted about as before. Linseed Oil has been neglected and nominally lower. Menhaden, Tanner and Crude Oil dull and irregular. Other kinds inactive on the basis of former quotations.

BREADSTUFFS.—There has been an improved demand noted for most kinds, which has been met and anticipated by holders at steady previous quotations....Crude has attracted more attention on the basis of 81½c. for bulk, at shipping ports, with changed hands for delivery within the next two weeks; and 82½c. in store, afloat, with sales reported of 4,500 bbls. for early delivery at this rate....Refined has been purchased here to the extent of 2,800 bbls. for early delivery, at 22½c., and 1,000 bbls. (not contracted) at 22½c., and 2,500 bbls. at 22½c., closing there at 22½c.@22¾c. for Crude, in bulk, and 23c. for Crude, in bbls.

PROVISIONS.—There has been very little call for meats in the trade, and prices have ruled lower, and about steady, on restricted offerings, for early delivery, and have been reported since our last of 300 bbls. in lots, at $11 25@$11 50 for New-Western and Jersey, and 100 bbls. at $11 75 for extra Jersey, and $10 00@$10 75 for Mess Prime. ⅌ bbl. For forward delivery the demand has been moderate with sales reported since our last of 4,000 bbls. Western Mess, June, at $12 00, and 1,000 bbls. City Mess, June, at $12 00. Cut Meats have been quiet and weak, as to price, ranging from 8¾c.@9c. ⅌ lb.....Cured Pork has been limited due from 10½c. to 11½c. for Hams, the latter for extra Sugar-cured, and 8½c.@9c. for Shoulders, ⅌ lb. The reported sales since our last equal 225 pks., within the range, as above, for Hams, and 100 pks. Shoulders, but the data have been limited, the demand from all sources having been of a light character, and prices have ruled lower since our last, of equal to 200 boxes, at 9c. for Short Clear, 9½c. for Long Clear, and 11c. for Staffordshire Hams, the latter for August delivery....Lard has been in moderate request for export, and prices have ruled steady, but the demand has been quite moderate for consumption, and prices have ruled lower, as to values, but has been in slack request, for all purposes. City product has been in some demand for shipment, but has attracted less attention from refiners, and prices have ruled lower, and closing at 9c. for early delivery, at 8¾c.@8¾c. for No. 1 to prime Steam and Kettle-rendered, chiefly at 9¼c. for prime Western Steam; 8¾c. for new, to arrive; 8¾c.@9c. for City Steam and Kettle-rendered, and 9¼c. for No. 1 to choice, for forward delivery. The demand continues limited, with sales reported since our last of 500 tcs. prime Western Steam, seller July, at 9¼c.; also 300 tcs. WHISKY.—Has been in limited demand, on the basis of 91c.@92c. ⅌ gal., sales, 180 bbls.

FREIGHTS.—The engagements in this line in June (Macey Erickson's report, notice this): Steam engagements of June 4 light business has been done in Wool. We reduce our quotations; but, in absence of transactions, they are for the most part nominal. For the month (by deal) there has been rather more business in the market, and a feeling exists that prices have reached their lowest point. Domestic Clip—There has been very little doing in fleece and pulled Wool, and prices have ruled lower. Commencing now to clip the views of growers are from 5c.@10c. above the views of buyers, the former holding for 70c. while buyers are offering but 60c. for the best Wools. Pall Mall Cotton has been sold at a considerable reduction from the reduced figures. The Spring Clip is now arriving, but attracts little attention. The point of Texas Wool continues to accumulate, there still being a difference between the views of buyers and sellers. Foreign Clothing Wool—The bulk of the old clip is now in first hands, and it will be nearly six months before we begin to receive supplies from the spring clip. Foreign Combing Wool—Quiet and steady in Boston, to be about 32,000 bales. The sales for the month have been light, but at the prices ruled all foreign Wools are cheaper than the new domestic clip, and, as the trade have been taking more than firm in their pretensions, we look for a more active business in foreign stock. The London sale of Wool opened on 20th June at a decline of about 10. ⅌ ℔. on Saxony and Cape, and 5@7½ ⅌ ct. on other cheaper descriptions, and a full recovery of the decline there noted. The greatest sales close on 21st July. About 220,000 bales are offered. Foreign Cloth Wool—Sales have been tasking more inquiry for this class of stock, but prices on most kinds have given way. To insure large transactions, holders would be obliged to make a further concession. The business done has been light. We estimate the stock in first hands here and in Boston, at 24,000 bales. Some important transactions have taken place at reduced figures. There is, however, no spirit of speculation; and to make sales our rates must be considered low. The stock is now considerably reduced; we estimate it to be in first hands here and in Boston, 2,250 bales.

FREIGHTS.—Grain and Provision room has been somewhat better supplied on hands, and rates, in most instances, have been somewhat more favorable to shippers leading to free engagements. Other kinds of tonnage have been offered with reserve, with quotations ruling, without change of importance. The chartering business has been on a restricted scale, with rates essentially unaltered. The demand has been quite moderate for vessels for the Cotton, Petroleum and Naval Stores trades, and for general tonnage very limited for other purposes....For Liverpool, the reported engagements since our last have been, by sail, 2,500 bushels Corn, to complete cargo, at 8½d.; and, by steam, 500 bales Cotton, at ⅝d. ⅌ ℔.; 19,400 bushels Grain at 7½d.@7¾d., chiefly at 7½d. for Corn and 7¾d. for Wheat; 15,500 bushels do. at 7d. for Corn and 7½d. for Wheat, taken in connection with the Cotton, above reported; 7,000 boxes Cheese at 32s. 6d.; 800 tcs. Bacon at 30s.; and 1,000 tcs. Tallow, at 30s., reported from Pensacola, at 30c., and a French bark, 593 tons, with Guano, from Mejillones, at 25s.....For London, by sail, 600 lbs. Rosin on private terms; and, by steam, 100 barrels Cheese at 32s.; and 21,000 bushels Grain, for a steamer of the National line, yet to arrive, at a rate to be hereafter determined on; also the Norwegian steam-ship St. Olaf, 1,325 tons, placed on the North for grain, at a rate, earlier mainly Grain, which has been reported previous to arrival.....For Glasgow, by steam, 50,000 bushels Grain at 7½d. for Corn, a [illegible] ⅌ ℔.....For Havana, a British bark, 291 tons, and a French bark, 298 tons, with Cotton from the Mexican Gulf, at $4 50 ⅌ bale.....For Boston, a bark, 216 tons, reported from Pensacola, at [illegible].

The name assumed by the Tammany-Republican-Democratic-Cincinnati-Baltimore-Free-Trade-Protection Party is a puzzle to most people. That by which we have just described it, although somewhat long, and involved, and contradictory, is like the professed principles of the party, and is therefore appropriate and easily understood. But what does "Liberal Reform" mean as used by the monstrous political hybrid? Simply this: A liberal putting of the Fenton Republicans and the Tammany Ring Democrats into office, and a rigid reform of true Republicans and War Democrats out of office. When the significance of the name is once understood, its fitness is manifest.

Medical evidence in the Stokes case is contradictory, as medical evidence always is. In case any of our readers happen to be shot, it may be a comfort to them to know that if the wound is probed it will kill them, and if it is not probed they will die. If they get the ball in the peritoneum it will be bad for them, and it will be as well to keep a sharp eye on the capillary circulation and the sympathetic nerve, for these are ticklish things to deal with. The median line and the smaller intestines may also prove troublesome. This is what we have learnt thus far from the evidence—what effect it all produces on the twelve men who never read any newspapers and have no opinions to call their own, we shall see another day. It will probably be their median line or intestines which will be most affected, for the present mode of getting a jury assumes that brains are "not thar."

Mr. NAST is engaged in the task of showing Democrats the humiliating nature of the bargain they are about to make at Baltimore. In this week's Harper's, he has a pair of cartoons, very severe but perfectly just, exposing Mr. GREELEY's former attitude of violence and bitterness to the Democrats North and South. These pictures speak volumes, and though they will not prevent the Democratic managers from carrying out the intrigue at Baltimore, they will remind many a Democrat of the degradation involved in the Tammany scheme of indorsing Cincinnati. It is difficult to say which of the designs is most telling. One represents H. G. lashing the back of a Democrat in the garb of a convict. The other shows him rubbing his hands with delight over the return of Confederate soldiers "to find poverty at their firesides, and see privation in the anxious eyes of mothers and the rags of children," as demanded in the Tribune. Each will cost the Baltimore-Cincinnati candidate a great many votes.

The Tribune tells us from day to day that certain well-known Tammany organizations and wards are "solid for GREELEY." The persons referred to have, in their individual capacity, a much greater inclination toward fluids than solids. But to defeat the Republican Party, oust the inflexible GRANT, and get in his place such a dough-faced, weak-kneed politician as GREELEY, even the Sixth Ward might consent to remain for three months in a state of semi-sobriety.

In another column will be found one of those remarkably clear and explicit financial statements which form so satisfactory a feature of the administration of Controller GREEN. While the expenditures of the past six months have been about twenty-seven and a half million dollars, the apparent increase on the City and County debt has been but seventeen and a half millions. From this, however, ought to be deducted the revenue bonds, amounting to over eleven millions, issued on account of expenses of 1872, and payable from the taxation of the year. Under Ring rule, it was safe to conclude that once a burden was always a burden, for CONNOLLY and his confederates contrived under their consolidated debt act to transform Revenue Bonds into permanent obligations as quickly as they matured. It is equally certain that they will not be allowed to become so by Controller GREEN. The bonds issued on account of the arrears of 1871, amounting to three millions of dollars, and payable from these taxes when collected, ought also to be deducted from the total of the debt. The real increase is to be found in the remaining three to four millions' worth of stocks specially authorized by law, on account of Croton water, parks, bridges, docks, and other purposes. The honesty and ability which Controller GREEN brings to the very formidable task of personally administering the enormous pecuniary outlay of New-York City, appear to be thoroughly appreciated in commercial circles. We understand that a loan of $900,000, for which bids were recently invited, elicited proposals to the amount of three millions, all at figures above par. It clearly pays to have an honest, resolute, and able man at the head of the City finances.

Pity the Poor Children.

People in the full vigor of life think it a great trial to be subjected to the present intense heat, and often suffer severely. But in the majority of cases they have strength enough to bear it, and can enjoy many facilities for alleviating their discomfort. It is different with the children. They are necessarily shut up within the house all day, the great heat prevents them getting refreshing sleep at night, they cannot eat, and they fall an easy prey to the countless maladies which beset our path at the outset of life. "The children have been dying like sheep since last Thursday," said a doctor to us yesterday; and indeed we all see every day how great has been the mortality among them. The mourners go about the streets, and everywhere may be heard the voice of Rachel weeping for her children, and refusing to be comforted.

It is hard enough for the children of the well-to-do. Though they sleep in well ventilated rooms and in comfortable beds, and can have careful attention and good medical advice, yet they fade rapidly under this disastrous sun. Their piteous wailings at night must reach the ears of most of us who are obliged to live in the City. The heat burst upon us before many families had time to leave the City, and for nearly a week we have been living in an atmosphere such as is experienced in July in the plains of Lower Bengal. Children of the well-to-do, however, are watched over anxiously by tender parents. There is another class less fortunate, and it is for their sakes we speak to our readers today on a most distressing subject. From our office windows we can see, any night, scores of poor little waifs and strays, lying about in the City Hall Park, where, perhaps, they have been brought by some elder sister or kindly neighbor, in the hope of getting a breath of fresh air. In their dismal homes they have no beds, can get no proper food, receive no attention when they fall sick, and are left to perish, as if they were forgotten and uncared for by God and man. It is enough to make the heart bleed to look at their white faces, and listen to their sorrowful moans. Some of them have parents still alive, but it is little those parents can do for them. The strikes have impoverished many families once in decent circumstances; and the curse of drunkenness beggars many a working man's home. It is the women and children upon whom the punishment falls.

We have never appealed in vain to the public for help for the deserving poor, and therefore we are always chary of making such appeals, knowing how generous and free is the response. But at present there is so much suffering going on around us that we cannot refuse to ask our readers to do something for the children. It is easy enough—too easy—to reach them. We do not want people to give their money in promiscuous charity. Let them write or send to the managers of the Mission Schools, the Secretary of the Five Points Mission, the managers of the Children's Aid Society, or apply to any of the respectable medical men whose practice lies in the poorer districts of the City, or to visiting clergymen. Any of these persons will tell them at once where their money can be applied with the certainty of its doing good. It will buy a little good food or fruit, enable their parents to keep ice in the house—ice being now so exorbitantly dear as to be absolutely beyond the reach of very poor people—and it will get them good medical attendance. The Mission Schools will doubtless distribute the money wisely; but do not give to "collectors" who call, unless their authority is well guaranteed, for we are assured that many swindlers are going about soliciting alms, and putting the money in their own pockets. A very little trouble and inquiry will enable the charitable to reach deserving objects. If excursions to the country or sea-side could be arranged for the poor children, it would be the best possible plan of enabling them to withstand the stress of the present season. It would not cost much to give a hundred children a happy day. Indeed, if some one would but organize the work, there are thousands of our citizens who would gladly give five or ten dollars each toward sending a party of children into the country for a week at a time. The pleasure thus given to the neglected little ones would be incalculable, and scores of lives would be saved. It is not for those who have brought their miseries upon themselves that we appeal—not for the drunkard, the spendthrift, or the profligate; it is for the helpless who have done no one any wrong, who, in too many instances, are forsaken and friendless in the world, and whose sorrows appeal to us with tragic pathos for relief.

Greeley's Hostility for Grant's Second Term.

"Peculation has prospered in the public service," said the Tribune of July 3, 1872, in a labored and lame attempt to prove President GRANT a corrupt and infamous man. But no longer ago than Dec. 4, 1871, the Tribune declared so to a rigid inquiry concerning the public funds:

"It will elicit facts proving that the sum total of recent losses by defaulters and peculators is far less than is generally supposed—that it has been less under Gen. GRANT than for a corresponding period under his immediate predecessor. In either case, false popular impressions are produced by the fact that a Collector of internal-revenue stands charged on the Bureau's books with all the assessments placed in his hands for collection; if he dies or is removed, or absconds, the amount collected and paid over by him is deducted, and a balance struck, which makes him a debtor for many thousands, when most of this consists of sums which he could not, or at least did not collect."

The Tribune having answered the Tribune so conclusively on this point, let us see further: July 2, the one-tune organ says:

"The friends of Gen. GRANT, when they ask us to vote for him a second time, ought at least to show that he has done honor to his office, and administered the Government with advantage to the country."

We admit that it is absolutely essential that the friends of Gen. GRANT should do this, and we propose to do it by short extracts from the Tribune. That journal, on Dec. 4, 1871, having shown that Gen. GRANT had effected a great reform in the keeping and disbursements of the public moneys, on the next day, in reviewing the President's last annual Message, proved that on all great issues the President had done honor to his office.

After a fervent eulogy of the tone of the Message on Impartial Liberty, it said:

"The fact that the President, who thus nobly embodies and enunciates the better impulses of our people, was himself a partisan of slavery down to the outbreak of our great civil war, so far from weakening the force of his demonstrations against the discarded shame and scourge of our country, but intensifies and emphasizes that testimony."

So the President has done honor to his office in his sincere devotion to Impartial Liberty. Next we were told:

"The President's recommendations that the Internal Taxes be swept away, except those known as Stamps, and those levied on liquors and tobacco, will meet with general approval."

So here again the President was administering his office to the advantage of the country. Again, the Tribune said:

"As to tariff revision the President reflects very nearly the average sentiment of the people. Unless the people were dishonoring themselves he could not be dishonoring his office by being in accord with them upon this important question."

But the Tribune testimony becomes even more direct when it treats of the financial success of the Administration. It said:

"The fact that the debt has been largely and steadily reduced, has done more than anything else to make the Administration strong and popular. So many millions paid off each month are to Gen. GRANT's Administration what Union victories on hard-fought fields were to Mr. LINCOLN's. No financial difficulties beset a ruler which is thus amply supplied with revenue, and is using it for such a purpose. The fact stated by the President that the annual burden of the debt is now seventeen millions less than it was when he was inaugurated, is a perfect Vicksburg to his supporters."

And we may add that Gen. GRANT has gone on doing this same thing. While, the Tribune on Monday last, was trying to show that the Administration of Gen. GRANT was more corrupt than that of ANDREW JOHNSON—it stated the very reverse six months ago—the Secretary of the Treasury was sending to the country his monthly statement of the public debt. This statement shows a decrease during the past month of $2,081,085 82, a decrease since March 1, 1873, of $34,837,154 36, making a total decrease in the public debt since the inauguration of Gen. GRANT of $336,007,957 71. This is indeed a "perfect Vicksburg to his supporters," and we do not wonder that the one-term organ yesterday concealed it from the general public by publishing the statement only in its money market report.

But it also appears from the Tribune of Dec. 5, 1871, that on the leading issue of the pacification of the Southern States the President has administered his office with advantage to the country, for it said:

"With regard to the Kuklux outrages in certain localities at the South, the President's representations are sound, moderate, and will be heartily approved by a large majority of the people. These outrages must be suppressed; peaceable citizens, however powerless and despised, must be protected in their humble homes, and if the States cannot, or will not, do this, the Union must and will."

We submit that the Tribune has satisfactorily answered the Tribune, and furnished unanswerable reasons why the people should vote for Gen. GRANT a second time. He has been honest and economical in the collection and disbursement of the public revenues, devoted to impartial liberty, wise and moderate in his dealing with the South, sensible and in thorough accord with the people in his ideas on internal taxation and tariff revision. If additional reasons were wanting, the Tribune admitted that the President had made "our foreign relations appear to be satisfactory in the main," and as to thorough civil service reform that "he has been there all along."

These are arguments for the re-election of Gen. GRANT which the Tribune in its apostacy will labor in vain to overthrow. The people have been convinced by them that the peace, dignity, and prosperity of the country demand that Gen. GRANT rather than HORACE GREELEY shall administer the Government during the next term, and they will act accordingly. If they should desire further light as to their duty, they will find it in the Tribune, where, in surveying the sneers of disappointed office-seekers that the Administration of Gen. GRANT was a failure, it said:

"Failure? How? In what? Have we not peace and plenty in the land? Is not our flag displayed and respected on every seal What foreign foe molests or threatens us? Who fears insurrection at home or invasion from abroad? In which of our thirty-six States are the masses wanting work, discontented, suffering?"

All this being assertion rather than interrogation, is as true now as when these words were written, and, what is bad for Mr. GREELEY, the people know it.

Another Victory for McCunn.

The Tribune having stepped into the position of chief organ of the Ring, left vacant by the World, finds itself exposed to the same sort of galling disappointments. The World was foolish enough to assume, with the greatest warmth, the cause of TWEED and his allies when they were nearest their fall. The World was, moreover, servile enough to defend an infamous piece of legislation like HALL's proposed amendments to the Code, after it had been unanimously condemned by all respectable lawyers and all decent journals. The futility of this performance has been surpassed by the Tribune's advocacy of Judge MCCUNN, after he had been found guilty by the Assembly, recommended for removal by the Governor, and when the verdict of the Senate was no longer doubtful. Mr. GREELEY's "organ" ought to be the best judge of the kind of support which is most necessary to its candidate in the forthcoming canvass. It certainly has enlisted the suffrage of men even more disreputable than Judge MCCUNN, but to outside observers it seems rather a desperate game to gain friends for Mr. GREELEY at the expense of insulting the judgment of the New-York Bar, and disgusting everybody who has the slightest regard for the purity of the Bench.

Now that MCCUNN has been removed by the unanimous vote of the Senate, the Tribune will be reduced to the alternative, either of eating its own words, or of advising MCCUNN to disregard the sentence of the Court before which he elected to be tried. According to the Tribune it was both "hasty and erroneous" to suppose that the abandonment of the defense by Mr. MCCUNN and his counsel amounted to a confession of judgment. The appeal was, it appears, taken on the very reverse of a groundless issue, and it must follow, with equal certainty, that the verdict of the Senate is one which MCCUNN is perfectly entitled to disregard. To the blunder of making one or more "doubtful rulings" the Senate has now, according to the Tribune logic, committed the further blunder of condemning MCCUNN in defiance of the opinion of ex-Judge SELDEN, sustained as it was by his "pure repute," "great ability" and implicit belief in Mr. GREELEY's fitness for the Presidency. The Senate was once before violently abused by the Tribune for taking the advice of Judge SELDEN, in regard to the case of Senator JAMES WOOD. Its members have not committed a similar mistake this time, but that will certainly not save them from the continued denunciation of Tammany's and Mr. GREELEY's somewhat variable "organ."

Though the Tribune may be disappointed at the result of yesterday's vote, the Bar and the people of New-York will find in it ample reason for congratulation. Acting without the advice and co-operation of the Judges of the Court of Appeals, the State Senate has proved itself an eminently just and impartial Court. When it becomes associated with the highest judicial talent in the State, and acting in the case of BARNARD as a regular Court of Impeachment, we may now confidently expect a result no less encouraging. In spite of the efforts of the Tammany-Greeley coalition, Reform has scored one more victory, whose significance does not end with the removal of Judge MCCUNN.

A Man Who Ought to Be Indicted.

Ten of the jury in the Meeker case held out for conviction, while two insisted on acquittal. We are glad to hear of so respectable a showing, and if, as may be hoped, this represents the average sentiment of the community, we trust that other like abuses may be taken in hand, and justice be done to those who are responsible for them. MEEKER, as is charged, has been corrupting boys, and catering to the vicious appetites of foul-minded men for several years, and if guilty, ought to be held to strict account. He is not, however, the only dealer in similar demoralizing rubbish, and it would be highly unfair, especially in view of the conflicting character of the evidence, if he should be punished, and the other miserable panderers go scot-free.

But at the best, or the worst, these purveyors of uncleanness operate on a comparatively restricted scale. Only a limited fraction of the public know of their whereabouts, or of what is sold in their dens when one gets there; since the gross wares which are their specialty, are kept hidden, for the most part, to avoid unfriendly interference. But the publisher and owner of the obscene and infamous periodical called Day's Doings thrusts his nasty sheet under the noses of the whole community. The news stands reek with the abomination, and so conspicuously is it displayed that it is scarcely possible for the passer-by to fail to see it. We do not doubt that this loathsome publication has demoralized more young people than all the shops and pictures of venders like MEEKER put together. The owner is reputed to have made a large sum of money by his infamous trade, and ought, at least, to be made to pay the handsome fine which a conviction under the law should enable the Recorder to impose.

The usual cry raised on such a recommendation as this is of the palliative order. We are promptly assured that such and such a foul nuisance is no worse than such and such another. Thus, it may be said that Mr. FRANK LESLIE's offense is no worse than that of the Tribune, in advertising the delectable "pretty waiter girls" establishments. Perhaps it is not, but "after the valets the masters." When justice is fairly meted out to a few of the coarser vagabonds in these congenial vocations, public opinion will probably insist on the punishment of those whose higher pretensions and more extended facilities enable them to pursue their trade in wider, if more insidious, directions. FRANK LESLIE, as the publisher of a most wicked and disgusting sheet, ought to be at once indicted. He tried to introduce Day's Doings into England, and it was at once suppressed, and a fine imposed on the venders. Cannot we do as much here?

Wires.

Mosquitoes are undeniably a tormenting species of insect; but there is this to be said in their favor, that you frequently have a very good chance of not only condemning, but promptly executing, one of the insects which has been drawing upon your resources. The fly, on the other hand, is gifted with unstriaded powers of eluding the human grasp, and torments you at will, while you impotently wrestle with him. He awakens you in the morning, just as you have sunk to rest after a sleepless night, he persistently resolves that you shall not be refreshed with any sleep after sunrise—for he is a horribly early riser—and he continues to harass you, especially at meal-times, throughout the day. A considerable mitigation of this evil might be accomplished by meeting the fly's tastes half way. His peculiar gastronomic propensities are well known. In the presence of dessert, he pays but little attention to dinner; and if saccharine attractions are placed at intervals about the room, on plates and dishes, we may enjoy a comparative immunity from attack.

We especially commend this view of the subject to proprietors of restaurants, the lives of whose guests are apt to be rendered a burden at this period by the attentions of those who never pay, but are always present. Sometimes a lethal engine called "fly-paper" is brought to bear against the enemy. There has, since the days of Solomon, been a prejudice in many minds against dead flies. While sharing this sentiment, we imagine that, as a choice of evils, most people would prefer the corpse to the body buzzing in their ears.

MINOR TOPICS.

It costs nearly one dollar per cubic yard to get the dirt out of our streets, but it is got out, and there is not much disposition to complain. Every one passing through our streets can see that they are very much cleaner than they were in the days when BROWN was paid for doing nothing, and the credit is due to Superintendent THORNE. He is demonstrating, even if at considerable cost, that it is possible to get the streets of this City clean and to keep them so. This does not seem much to be thankful for, but we struggled so long and so fruitlessly to get out of the dirt, that our citizens are disposed to be unduly elated over the fact that we are out, at least partially, and to give corresponding credit to the official who has accomplished their deliverance.

The Monmouth Park race meeting of yesterday was unique in the history of American sport. There were certainly more people around the track than were ever congregated at a horse race on this continent. Tested by the preponderance of really respectable spectators among the huge assemblage, it would be difficult to match the favorable characteristics of yesterday's meeting on any race-course in the world. There was unmistakable evidence of the drying up of the streams of Tammany bounty, in the conspicuous absence from the course of the rank and file of Ring politicians. This crowd was left to linger disconsolate around the corner groceries of the City, but comforted themselves with the reflection that by next year "Honest HORACE" would be President, and his Tammany supporters would, once more, have their hands in other people's pockets.

Bassett's defeat by Longfellow was quite a violent surprise to our local sporting fraternity. Betting men, in spite of their jealously-guarded reputation for shrewdness, are curiously given to trust anything rather than their own judgment. New-Yorkers who gamble on the turf had developed a very high degree of confidence in the "luck" of Mr. MCDANIEL's stable, and were proportionately "sold" by the easy achievement of the great Kentuckian. Longfellow is now unquestionably the first mare in the country, a fact of which the Southern gentlemen who yesterday carried off a goodly supply of Northern capital were perfectly aware before he walked away with the honors of the July meeting at Monmouth Park.

Horses seem to be among the chief sufferers from the hot weather; many of them can be seen falling and dying in the streets from exhaustion. If motives of humanity are not sufficient to induce owners and drivers to take proper precautions against such results, it is singular they are not prompted by self-interest to do everything possible to spare us the sight of these poor brutes dying in intense agony in all our thoroughfares. A horse carefully driven, with his head properly protected from the heat, can be used to a sufficient extent in the business of weather, and we hope something will be done to compel all those using them to adopt precautions which many are now trying with excellent effect.

Ship-owners are almost in despair over the difficulty experienced in procuring seamen for either long or short voyages. The direct result of this scarcity has been to cause an increase in the scale of wages of from forty to fifty per cent. Some years ago, it used to be quite an easy matter to obtain able-bodied men at from twenty to twenty-five dollars a month. Now they cannot be had for less than from forty to fifty dollars, and a liberal advance for present necessities and outfits. This lack of sailors, it appears, is not confined to New-York alone. Complaints of a similar nature come from the principal ports of the United States, and it is not long since we heard of the strike among the sailors in England. The trials, the trials and dangers of a seaman's life have never been fully appreciated. Every one knows what a prey poor Jack has been to the land-sharks, and how easily he has been induced to part with his hard-earned savings. If these should, therefore, be a better prospect for him in the future, very few persons will be found to sympathize with the wealthy ship-owners for having to be a little more liberal in sharing their large profits.

JAILBIRDS AND DRINKERS.

Some of the Southern orators whose speeches reach us from hot-bed time, are living witnesses that the day of "stump" speaking has not yet passed away in the Northern States, where political meetings are made up from thickly populated neighborhoods, and consist largely of men of one party, we can hardly understand the conditions under which a Southern speaker appears. His audience is not all friendly; he has to supply much of the "entertainment" instead of drawing it from the sympathies of his hearers; and especially he has to be ready with pertinent replies to more or less impertinent volunteer criticism. We are bound to say, without partiality, that in plain commonsense arguement, in the employment of specific facts, and in appeals to the higher qualities of human nature, none of the Southern political talkers excel the more intelligent negroes.

The long-suffering people of this City are still without information as to what the Board of Health is "going to do about" the nuisance of sea-cushions. They are, however, as in the last whatever as to what their own desires in the premises are. Could they have their own way, they would unite in pitching the vermin-breeding cushions out of the windows. One of the companies, by the way, puts in the plea that entirely new seats would have to be made for their cars if cushions were rejected. This is impudent because obviously absurd. Cars are now used in neighboring cities with movable seats of cane and wood filling the space formerly occupied by cushions. We assure the Health Board the people are in earnest on this question. Can they not be given cars that a gentleman or lady can enter without feeling the disquieting suspicion of parasites?

A Roman Catholic Professor of the University of Prague has written a book giving some interesting statistics about the membership of religious orders in Germany. He makes it tolerably obvious that the great Protestant Empire is, in many parts, as much priest-ridden as Spain or Italy. In Prussia, the Professor's figures show that there is one priest or member of a religious fraternity for every 884 Catholics of all ages; in Bavaria, the proportion is one for every 800, and for all Germany, one for every 481. Coming down to particular towns, the relative numbers of Catholic ecclesiastics and laymen, are still more surprising. Taking the adult Catholic population of Cologne, it seems that out of every 105, there is one clergyman. In Aix-la-Chapelle there is one ecclesiastic to every thirty-eight adult Catholics; in Minster one to twenty, and in Treves one to every four! Such data help us to understand how huge a task has been undertaken by Prince BISMARCK in his struggle against Ultramontanes and Jesuits.

Sea-Bathing.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A few days more and the sea-shore will become the general rendezvous of society. On the borders of the ocean, the atmospheric pressure is greater than any where else; the air consequently contains more oxygen, that is to say, more vital air. Independently of the elements common to the atmosphere in general, the air one respires on the shore is impregnated with the emanations from the sea, and thus we can readily explain the beneficial results of a sojourn at the sea-side. But it is of sea-bathing I intend to speak.

There is not a single medical practitioner who does not have brought to his personal observation, every succeeding year, the deplorable consequences of the irrational or empiric use of sea-bathing, and does not see a number of persons who, so far as from either being cured or relieved of their maladies, have actually suffered an aggravation of them. Others, again, strongly constituted, and actually in the enjoyment of full health, who, after having taken a few baths simply for pleasure or pastime sake, are reluctantly compelled to deny themselves the enjoyment they find in sea-bathing. Might it not be argued that such individuals would be spared those effects if sea-bathing were the innocent, and at once the universal panacea, its unthinking advocates proclaim it? The frequent occurrence of those ill-effects suggest the endeavor to account for them. Salt water may be considered the best cold mineral water, from the number and proportion of chemical elements that compose it.

PHYSICAL PROPERTIES.—The color of the sea varies considerably; sometimes its hue is a silvery shade mixed with blue, at other times a bluish gray; but these changes are the consequence only of the reflection of light; for taken up at mid-ocean, no matter from what depth, sea-water is transparent, wholly colorless. It has a salty, brackish, loathsome taste, resulting from the different salts it holds in solution. Its specific gravity differs according to locality, and varies near the coast, in rivers, or the middle of the sea. Half a mile out, at low tide, during the months of July or August, the thermometer when thrown into the water, will vary from fifty-six to sixty-four degrees, according to the temperature of the atmosphere and the heat of the sun.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.—The constituent principles of sea-water change according to the place it is dipped up at, whether at the surface or at a given depth. Chloride of sodium is the predominating principle; it is found in variable quantities. Besides this salt, sea-water contains potassium, ammoniacum, (MARCET,) iodine, (KRUGER,) and bromide, (BALARD.)

MEDICAL PROPERTIES.—Sea-water is a different agent when employed externally, or when used for bathing. As a drink it is purgative, and must be cautiously prescribed. It is applicable only to lymphatic temperaments in affections which are slow of recovery. But it is most generally in baths that salt water is made use of; if not indulged in to excess, these cold baths are at the same time refreshing and tonic to the healthy individual by absorbing the superfluous heat of the body; but if in the healthy state, these baths strengthen all the organs equally, in chronic diseases they imitate an over-excitement to the sick organ, which in a moderate degree, may be efficacious, while if too strong, it will be followed by serious accidents.

First of all, the bath must be of very short duration in order to secure a proper reaction, which will tend to re-establish the equilibrium of heat when it is unequally distributed. If this is obtained the bath will stimulate the entire organism, and give it new energy, first, by the pressure exercised on the surface of the body by the considerable volume of the water and its specific gravity, which is greater in the ocean than in the rivers; second, by the percussion of the waves, which impart a shock equally, if not more, powerful than that of the shower-bath; third, by the saline properties of the waves, which, while stimulating the vitality of the skin, in some degree penetrates into the blood by absorption.

It is of extreme importance to determine the duration of the sea-bath. A prolonged stay in cold water diminishes vital power, prevents reaction and occasions headaches, cramps, &c. The bath should be from twenty six minutes to a quarter of an hour at the very utmost. The weaker the bather, and the colder the water, the shorter should the bath be.

The best time for bathing is between the hours of 7 and 11 A. M.; yet those who are delicate or have but little reaction, do well to bath at noon. But no one should go in the water within an hour from the last meal.

Persons who swim may give themselves up to that exercise with advantage. Those who are not good swimmers, or are too weak to practice it, should run into the sea to a certain distance, then plunge in head foremost, and repeat this a number of times; this is called the exercise. When the sea is rough, the water thick and heavy, such bather should turn his back to the surge.

On leaving the water the bather goes to his bath-house, rubs, and dresses himself; and if he then experiences a feeling of warmth all over, he may consider the bath beneficial. If, on the contrary, he cannot get warm, if the reaction does not readily take place, he may know that he has stayed too long, or that the temperature of the water was too cold for him, or that sea-bathing is not adapted to the actual condition of his health.

Sea-bathing hardens the skin, gives it more consistency, fortifies the muscular and lymphatic systems, renders digestion and sleep the functions in constitutes a powerful medication which should be used with economy a sort of febrile action proper to receive the medicative diseases of a chronic maintenance of chronic diseases. But these therapeutic means must not be generalized or employed promiscuously. It has often produced serious trouble; it is specially suited to lymphatic and nervous diseases, provided the sufferers have sufficient strength to react against the impression of the cold, and the disease be not complicated by inflammatory symptoms, for some of apoplexy and peripneumonia as the result of sea-bathing are not at all rare.

The efficacy of sea-bathes shows itself particularly in all scrofulous affections. Children of strumous diathesis, after having breathed the sea-air a short time and taken a few baths, very soon have the color back to their cheeks, gain, accruing vitality and strength which they had lost.

To conclude, we may say of sea-bathing as of mineral waters, (on which I mean to expatiate at some future time,) their beneficial effects are often only consecutive; that is to say, that these effects manifest themselves only after a shorter or longer space of time after the season is over.

THE JESUITS IN PRUSSIA.

Impatience of the Legislative Measures for the Expulsion of the Sect—The Government and the Clerical Opposition—The Agonizing Struggle—Light from Austria.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BERLIN, Thursday, June 12, 1873.

Even the most important proceedings of the close of the parliamentary session are completely dwarfed as public interest by the measure received upon on Monday in the Federal Council and to be brought before the House to-morrow, as good as under the personal guidance of Prince BISMARCK, posting up to Berlin for the occasion, on purpose for the second reading to take place on Monday. Ever since the famous Jesuit debate the proposed bill for the repression of Jesuits has formed the great topic of the day, and public and parliamentary gossip has turned and twisted it about in the oddest way. After so crushing a speech as Prince BISMARCK's refusal to go again to Canossa and after his threat to visit Bishop KAMPHAUS with the severest punishment at his command, Government could not surely, it was held, delay so popular and so urgent a measure, nor make it otherwise than extremely stringent. Bishop NAMCZANOWSKI's deposition—which has brought him in new honors at Rome—and the violent denunciations threatened against his conduct by that most sacred of official prints, the Provincial Correspondenz, tended to strengthen this impression. Shortly after, however, even semi-official prints warned the public that no bill was coming at all this session. It transpired that the measure had been strongly assailed in the Prussian Cabinet by a minority, led by Count EULENBERG. Skeptical liberals then began to quote the proverb—clerus, clerus, non decimat. Suddenly things took a different turn. M. WAGENER, the quondam editor of the Cross Gazette, and conservative leader, posted to Varzin with a draft bill in his pocket, and returned almost immediately with the Chancellor's sanction. The Council approved it, and yesterday the draft made the tour of the House as a printed motion. It did not occupy the printers long, and it has served to reassure the trembling Ultramontanes, whom the first announcement caused some palpitations, evoking a threat from them to depart for Berlin in a body so as to reduce the Assembly below a quorum—a plot, by the bye, out of their power to achieve.

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL.

The bill contains two paragraphs only; but in as few words as it is about possible to shape into a bill, it throws a sort of electric light on the entire policy of the Government with regard to the clerical question, such as must carry conviction even into the most prejudiced mind. None of the terrible things threatened have come to pass; indeed, it is difficult to see how they should have been achieved, since even the present bill, if put into force at all, defies the principles not only of fair but even of practical justice. The Order of Jesuits, it had been said, would be proscribed and the members deprived of their rights as citizens. The State was to be done with them. Other States were under no obligations to receive the disowned subjects of Germany, and they could not be killed in order to be got rid of. The Ministerial motion does not go so far as this; it simply empowers the police of each country to treat Jesuits—according to their own discretion—as deprived of their natural rights as citizens. It therefore—like its predecessor, the Schools Inspection bill—lays the whole power of judgment into the hands of Government, binding it neither to friendliness with nor hostility to the obnoxious Order. It will depend upon the caprice of Prince BISMARCK whether the Jesuits are to be stamped out or to be left at large under his august protection. Stamping out, as observed, is a difficult course, for the ecclesiastics cannot be killed, and to banish them would be a hopeless attempt, since no country can be compelled to keep them. The injustice of turning out one's own proscribed into a neighboring country has been forcibly illustrated of late by the removal of French Communists into England, and after the severe censure passed by Germany on this unneighborly act, it could not consistently adopt the same principle. At best the banished Jesuits would, after a fruitless pilgrimage in prison vans, through various countries, be brought back, expelled everywhere in turn, to their first starting point, whence they could not be driven a second time. The most objectionable side of the measure, however, is the dictatorality with which it invests Government, and which it is not too much to be apprehended will be turned to account as a means to party ends. The country has demanded from Prince BISMARCK a measure to clip the wings of the politico-ecclesiastical Order, to free the country for good from its incubus, and he replies by assuming the power to deal with the hated Order as he may think best. That is like giving a stone when bread is asked. The only practical effect which the measure can have is to drive the Ultramontanes into the arms of their former ally, and that is just what the liberals dread. It has already occasioned surprise that the clericals have voted stanchly with Government in two party divisions, viz., on the Supreme Court of Control and the military penal code; and now that Prince BISMARCK has again made his peace with the rebellious conservatives, it is thought no more than probable that a reconciliation will again, some time or other, be brought about between him and the Romanists. All that has been done hitherto may be interpreted quite as well into friendliness under the pressure of popular demands as into hostile persecution. The Church has been censured, called to order, threatened; but though individuals have been prosecuted, no decisive action has been taken against its collective force. And within these bounds the policy of Government appears resolved to abide. The present move is nothing more than a trans-thrust disclaiming the power which the Crown held at its disposal, in order not to retrench a questionable advantage, but to recall their obedience.

THE APPROACHING DISCUSSION.

The measure is coming up for discussion to-morrow, and it was a wise resolve of Prince BISMARCK to come up at least, for the second reading to make the bill palatable to the majority by his presence, for the critique passed upon it is far from favorable. It is a phantom measure, formidable in appearance, but powerless when grappled with; that does not prevent the Ultramontanes from turning it to account by representing themselves as persecuted martyrs.

LIGHT FROM AUSTRIA.

An useful side-light is thrown on the question by the discussion in the Austrian Constitutionalist Club on the same subject a few days ago. If Prussia gets rid of her Jesuits, the natural anticipation is that some of them will seek refuge in Austria, and parliamentary circles are busying themselves with projects for preventing this. After examining the matter from all sides, even the most hostile to the Church, the Constitutionalists have arrived at the conviction that what is wanted is not a repressive law to banish the Jesuits or other monastic orders, for that is practically impossible—they will always turn up again under some new mask—but to regulate their institutions and their relations to the lay world. A bill of this character, defining what is to be legitimate and what illegitimate, and subjecting the monastic orders again to a supervision, would have been more to the purpose also in Germany than trusting such shrill persecutions as it has yet brought forward, which serve no purpose but to concentrate greater power in the hands of the Prince Minister.

THE GREAT RACE.

Longfellow Easily Beats Harry Bassett in 4:34.

Extraordinary Crowd of People to Witness the Struggle.

Nearly Forty Thousand Persons on the Ground.

Trials and Tribulations of the Spectators.

The Hopeful Stakes Won by Bassett's Entry—Lyttleton Wins the Mile Race—A Splendid Day and Magnificent Racing.

The great racing event of 1872 has come and gone. The contest between Harry Bassett and Longfellow, on which the attention of all men interested in horses has been riveted for many months, and which has ever been the subject of considerable betting in London among the leviathan English sporting men, took place yesterday, and resulted in so overwhelming a defeat for the former, that those who know his recordare utterly unable to account for it. But though there have been many races in this country which have been far more worthy of historical preservation than this, there never was a contest in America which was witnessed by such extraordinary numbers. It is speaking within bounds to say that there were present yesterday in Monmouth Park on the Grand Stand, in the quarter-stretch, in the Club-house and the field not less than 40,000 persons. Of these many came in carriages from various parts of New-Jersey, many from the metropolitan watering-place, Long Branch, many from Philadelphia and the South by special trains connecting with the New-Jersey Southern. But the great bulk of the visitors came from New-York. At least 25,000 hailed directly from Gotham. They were of all classes. There was the rough, pure and simple, there was his brother with the tawdry trappings of Tammany, there was the sturdy laborer, there was the intelligent mechanic of whom we have heard so much during the present strikes. There were tradesmen, bankers, brokers, railway men, oil men. There were clerks, there were newspaper boys, there were tired printers who had worked throughout the night, and jaded editors whose labors had ceased also only with the dawning. In fine there was almost every class and condition waiting by the thousands at Pier No. 50 North River to get on board the Plymouth Rock. So much enthusiasm about a horse, or even a pair of horses seems surprising, but the fact is New-Yorkers take too few holidays, and the world is quite supposed to see them on sensible as to make even a horse race an excuse for a dash away from carting carts, into a region of fine air plus excitement.

THE FIRST BOAT.

It is hard to say when the first person desirous to start by the Plymouth Rock arrived at the pier. It must have been some time on Monday night. The steam-boat was to start at 6:30 A. M., but when editors and printers left their work at early dawning, the great extent of the pier was crowded with people patiently waiting the selling of tickets. These were disposed of on the boat and also at the entrance to the pier. When at length the officials arrived and began to sell them, such vast numbers crowded on that the huge boat looked like some colossal white thing covered with huge bees swarming. The human insects were everywhere, on the hurricane deck, around the pilot-house, in the boats, on the bridge, where the stately captain usually strides with dignity to and fro, as he issues his orders. From every available position human legs dangled in the air; in every possible place human heads protruded. Such was the immense weight of the living freight that the vessel was sunk to her guards from the fore part almost to amidships, and the water which swashed over poured into the baggage and ruined considerable property. The interior of the steam-boat presented a striking scene. The great saloon, decorated with the frippery so dear to the soul of the late owner, was crowded almost as badly as the outside. The breezy seats in the front and the quiet ones in the stern were jammed as closely with campstools as human nature in its most enduring mood could allow. Once seated you were fixed for the trip, until you arrived at Sandy Hook, for to attempt to move was to tear the flimsy robes of fair ladies in every direction. The wiser ones breakfasted on board, and as soon as they embarked made their way to the saloon and had an excellent meal, though the prices charged were somewhat disproportionate to the food given.

THE CARS.

After a very slow trip the Plymouth Rock arrived at Sandy Hook, and the process of disembarkation commenced. Then the rowdy element developed itself with its usual brutal selfishness. Great burly ruffians, in their intense desire to get a seat in the cars, pushed past delicate ladies with the utmost violence, tearing their dresses with their clumsy feet. Others, not so brutal, naturally, being pushed, began to push back, and a fearful struggling was one which the friends of our Metropolis would rather not have witnessed. But at last everybody got off, and then began a rush for the cars. Just as there were not steamers enough at Pier No. 50, so there were not cars enough at Sandy Hook. Those who were fortunate enough to get aboard the first train had no further troubles were over. But they were mistaken. The locomotive not being powerful enough to drag all the cars, took some and left the others on the siding. By this time everybody had realized that there was no managing head in the transportation, and that the visit to the races would be a series of trials and tribulations of spirit. Those who remained behind had to stay until the Josephine arrived with her cargo, and then as all could not be taken away, a portion had to remain until the Jesse Hoyt arrived with another batch of miserables. It was now 11 o'clock, and there were many unfortunates who had been since 6:30 A. M. on the move, but had not got beyond the Hook. They were fast sinking into the stupor of utter despair. At last came the Plymouth Rock with another cargo, but a much smaller one of race-goers, and these were at length taken to the race-course.

THE ENTRANCE.

The managers of the Monmouth Park Association, with a denseness of ignorance which seems astounding, placed the grand wide entrance to their race-course on the Eatontown road, and near the line of railway leading from Sandy Hook. The quarter-stretch and a portion of the field were reserved for the thousands who come by the cars a few narrow apertures, which reminded one irresistibly of the eye of the needle and the camel. To make matters still more disagreeable, partitions had been placed in front, so that as soon as they could be only passed by filing through sideways. The authorities had neglected to issue upon tickets of admission being purchased by those who wanted them with their route ticket. The consequences were that between the crowds who were pressing to buy tickets and the crowds who were endeavoring to enter there was a shameful blockade which lasted for half an hour. During this pleasant period of probation the pickpockets went to work, the rough pushed and bullied, the ladies were crushed, crowded, squeezed and had their dresses torn, and everybody became disgusted with the Association for their want of common sense. Arrived at the grand stand matters were not much better. Tickets had been sold here for more than the building could possibly seat, and so those who had no seat for their tickets were continually endeavoring to obtain surreptitious entry to the quarter-stretch, or to the seats devoted to the Press. It was impossible to move comfortably in any direction. There were ten thousand persons managed to get on board, and a few late comers were compelled to pass on board the steamer Jesse Hoyt, lying near by. Though the Plymouth Rock was full of passengers by 7, she did not move from the wharf until near 8 o'clock, at which time more trains could be discerned coming down. The success attending the movements of the leading trains did not attend those which followed, owing to the wretched management of affairs. The second train, which laid on the siding, succeeded in getting in motion soon after the first, but owing to the imperfect condition of the locomotive it took twenty-five minutes to proceed. Frequent stoppages were made, and when the train reached the Highlands, the engineer discovered that the tubes in his boiler were leaking, so the train was cut in two, and the first half slowly dragged down to the Hook. It however brought passengers enough to fill the Jesse Hoyt to her full capacity, so her Captain cast off his hawsers and started for the City, leaving the Josephine to receive the remainder of the passengers on board the broken train, and those who were to come in by the regular evening train from Philadelphia.

THE DELAYED TRAIN.

The remaining half of the dismembered train was kept at Long Branch until the arrival of the Philadelphia train, when it took up the cars containing the race people, and proceeded slowly down to Sandy Hook, where the Josephine was reached. There the conductor received a telegram from Mr. PECK, the Superintendent, at Sandy Hook to wait until "Train No. 7" came up. The consequence was that the down train was kept standing at Scabright's for four hours, and a riotous scene was the result. The passengers assumed such a threatening attitude to the railroad officials, threatened to tear down the depots, and a few desperate spirits even went so far as to decide upon seizing possession of the locomotive if the conductor did not proceed to Sandy Hook. The conductor and engineer endeavored to quiet the passengers by telling them that they were only obeying orders, and that if inexperienced hands did take possession of the train they would probably run it off the track or come in collision with the expected up-train, but all of these efforts failed to appease the mob, for such it had become, and they were so fierce in their demeanor and threats that the conductor finally telegraphed to the Hook that he was coming down to prevent disorder and damage to the property of the Company. This brought matters to a crisis, and the train managed to reach the wharf in safety, the up-train not being dispatched. Half an hour sufficed for the embarkation of the passengers aboard the Josephine, and she reached this City at midnight, with a weary assemblage of disgusted individuals. There were fully 1,000 persons who could not get home to New-York at all, many being compelled to walk to Long Branch to remain all night.

THE HOMEWARD TRIP.

As the Plymouth Rock swung out from the wharf, she presented a curious and picturesque appearance, owing to the immense number of passengers on board. Being a slow boat, she made heavy work of it in getting up the harbor, and when the Jesse Hoyt arrived off Bay Ridge the Plymouth Rock was but a short distance ahead. It was then quite dark, but the people on board the Jesse Hoyt were so quiet that they could be heard on the port side of the boat. Curiosity to hear the witcery or the help uttered by a drowning man who had fallen overboard from the Plymouth Rock apparently unperceived by those on board, for she did not stop. The pilot of the Jesse Hoyt heard the words of the man in the water almost as soon as the passengers, so he rang his bell to slow the engines, and the steamer become stationary. The cry of "a man overboard" ran through the steamer in an instant, and a scene of wild excitement ensued. Men shouted, women screamed, and there became danger that others would fall overboard. The officers of the steamer hailed a small row-boat that happened to be near by, and ordered it to go in search of the man, but beyond throwing a few life-preservers into the water, made no other effort to succor the unfortunate man. The little row-boat pulled around for some time in the vicinity, but little success, but at length a cry of "all right" came over the water, and the steamer immediately proceeded on her way to the City. Despite the fact that the officers of the steamers expressed themselves satisfied with the result, a division of opinion existed among the passengers as to the propriety of the proceeding, many fearing that he could not have been found, while others insisted that he was safe.

The arrangements for the transportation of visitors to the races were wholly inadequate to the demands of the thousands who so suddenly precipitated themselves upon the Park, and the blame rests upon the managers of the Association and upon the failure of the railroad company to fulfill its promises. Some excuse was to be found for the caterers on the ground, as the number of visitors far exceeded the expectations of the managers. The necessity for an early start made the spectators uncomfortably hungry, and the intense heat of the day rendered them thirsty to the last degree. Under these circumstances it would have required supplies not usually found at a race-course to meet the demand, and the failure to supply the immediate cries for food and drink should be leniently considered.

The Sailing.

The racing of the day will long be remembered by those who were present. Ice, although the track was very heavy in loose soil, the time made was excellent, and, taken as a whole, the sport has never been excelled in this vicinity. There were three races on the programme, the first of which was the Hopeful Stakes for two-year olds, in which eight youngsters started. It was won by F. Morris' Eclipse colt out of Molly Jackson. The second race was of mile heats, and had been entered, old John Harper's colors being borne to the front, by Lyttleton, that game little son of Lexington, and Nantura. The third race was the struggle for the Monmouth Cups and the championship of the turf between Longfellow and Harry Bassett, and although the latter started as favorite at $1,500 against $1,200, he was badly beaten. The old man Harper was so overcome with joy at his victory, that he would have fallen on the track, had not his friends rushed to his assistance. It was a glorious victory, but Col. McDaniel still shows fight, and will no doubt meet his antagonist in the out at Saratoga. Below are given the full details of the running.

THE HOPEFUL STAKES.

The opening race that began this eventful day was the Hopeful Stakes, for two-year olds, of the value of $800, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each, pay or play, for two-year olds, which closed with twenty-six entries, nine of which were announced as starters, viz.: M. A. Littel's ch. c. Fellow Craft, by imp. Australian, out of Aerolite, by Lexington; John F. Chamberlin's b. f. Mary Constant, by Bonnie Scotland, out of Jane, by imp. Knight of St. George; A. Belmont's br. f. Indiana, by Kentucky, out of Varina, by Herr; H. P. McGrath's b. c. Tom Bowling, by Lexington, out of Lucy Fowler, by imp. Glencoe; R. W. Waldron's ch. f. Minnie W., by Planet, out of Edna, by imp. Knight of St. George; J. C. Hare's b. c. Colchis, by Asteroid, out of Edith, by imp. Yorkshire; F. Morris' ch. c. by imp. Eclipse, out of Molly Jackson, by Vandal; W. J. Bacon's ch. f. Dolorosa, by Exchequer, out of Tribulation; and Zeb Ward's br. c., by Asteroid, out of Fairy. The betting was very close on the result, for two-year-olds rarely are very numerous, and although the distance is but half a mile, when a good start generally decides it. The following pools will give a general idea as to the direction of the betting stream:

Minnie W.	$125	$225	$500
Zeb Ward	125	220	400
Tom Bowling	130	180	300
Dolorosa	70	95	175
Mary Constant	40	70	95
Field	125	175	210
Total	$650	$1,075	$1,525

THE RACE.

The distance being but a mile, they were started from the half-mile pole. One false start and they were off. Mary Constant jumping off first, with Morris second and Tom Bowling third. As they came round the lower turn, however, Morris came to the front like the wind, with Tom Bowling second and Zeb Ward third, Mary Constant having fallen to a poor. Morris kept to the front past the three-quarter pole, with Tom Bowling still second, Zeb Ward third and Minnie W. fourth. When they came up the homestretch, Morris came away, but Tom Bowling came with a rush and headed Morris. It was difficult to imagine the result as they came together, and the excitement ran high. Thus the pair came to within a few feet of the stand when Morris colt spurted out and won one of the closest races ever witnessed, by a nose only. Zeb Ward was third, three lengths behind, and two lengths in front of Medora, Aerolite fifth, Minnie W. sixth, Dolorosa seventh, Mary Constant eighth and Fellowcraft ninth.

THE MILE HEATS.

The second race on the programme was that most popular of all races—the mile heats—in which there were the following eight entries, viz.: John Harper's br. h. Lyttleton, 5 years, by imp. Lexington, out of Fanny Holton; F. M. Hall's b. c. John Merryman, 4 years, by Eclipse, out of La Rose; D. McDaniel's ch. c. Abdel Kooree, 4 years, by imp. Australian, out of Kooree; W. Costello's ch. c. Saucebox, 4 years, by Star Davis, out of Pleiaddie; J. D. Swigert's b. c. Shylock, 3 years, by Lexington, out of Fairy; J. B. and H. R. Davis' br. c. Piedmont, 3 years, by Asteroid, out of Fairy; Coffin & Lawrence's b. c. Lochiel, 4 years, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, out of Bonnet, and John McCormick's b. f. Belle Aiken, 4 years, by Second Jack Malone, out of Belle Aiken. Of these eight, seven faced the starter, Saucebox being withdrawn. Abdel Kooree and Lyttleton were the favorites, and sold on even terms, as the following pools will show:

Abdel Kooree		$500	$325
Lyttleton		500	325
Lochiel		400	300
Shylock		325	215
John Merryman	Field	125	110
Piedmont
Belle Aiken
Total		$1,875	$1,375

FIRST HEAT.—After some delay they were sent off to a fair start with Lyttleton in the lead, Piedmont second, and Shylock third. On going to the turn, Piedmont rushed to the front, but soon fell back among the rear horses, while Belle Aiken shot to the front and made the running, Lochiel in the mean time going up to the second place. When they reached the quarter-pole their positions were as follows: Belle Aiken first, a length in front of Lochiel, who was the same distance away from John Merryman, who had now worked up to the third place. Lyttleton was taken, and dropped by Abdel Kooree. As they flew down the backstretch, Lochiel commenced to close upon Belle Aiken, while John Merryman gave way from the third place, which was now assumed by Piedmont. When they passed the half-mile pole, Belle Aiken showed but a neck in front of Lochiel, who was now leading John Merryman, and Shylock third, while the two favorites, Lyttleton and Abdel Kooree, were lapped and struggling for the fifth place. As they came round the lower turn Lochiel gave Belle Aiken the go-by and led but a half length. Kooree and Lyttleton were coming with a rush, and both passed Belle Aiken, who was a trifle lame. As they came up the homestretch Rose urged Kooree to his utmost turn, and succeeded in heading Lochiel. A magnificent struggle now occurred between the two, but at the critical moment Lochiel made a grand rush and won the heat by a head's length in 1:45. Lyttleton was a clear three lengths behind, Piedmont fourth, Shylock fifth, Belle Aiken sixth, and John Merryman seventh.

SECOND HEAT.—Lochiel was now the favorite. When the drum tapped they got away to a good start, Kooree being off first, Lyttleton second, Shylock third, Belle Aiken fourth, Lochiel fifth, Piedmont sixth and Merryman seventh. When they went to the turn but one change occurred—Lochiel going up to the fourth place. As they passed the quarter-pole Kooree was half a length in front of Lyttleton and Shylock, who were on even terms. As they went along the backstretch Shylock showed in front of Lyttleton, for a moment, but he soon gave way to Lyttleton, who closed rapidly upon Abdel Kooree, so that the latter led but his neck's length at the half-mile pole, Shylock being third, and Lochiel fourth. On the lower turn Shylock gave way, and Lochiel took the third place. Lyttleton now caught Kooree by the head, and they passed the three-quarter pole neck and neck, with Lochiel close upon them, and closing up at every jump. When they came up the home stretch Abdel Kooree gave out, and Lochiel took the lead, and another, while Lyttleton came to the front. Lochiel struggled gallantly and reached Lyttleton's head, but the latter again poked his nose to the front, and then won the heat by a neck's length. Abdel Kooree was third, eight lengths behind, Shylock fourth, John Merryman fifth, Piedmont sixth, and Belle Aiken seventh.

THIRD HEAT.—The fourth was now reduced to a match between Lyttleton and Lochiel, the others pulled out. Lyttleton brought $1,200, and Lochiel $630. When the drum tapped Lyttleton got away two lengths in the lead, but when they reached the turn Lochiel got on even terms with him. They went round the lower turn yoked. A beautiful race ensued. When they reached the quarter-pole Lyttleton showed his neck in front, but as they went down the back stretch Lochiel again got on even terms with him. Again did the gallant little Lyttleton get his nose to the front as he reached the half-mile pole, and on the lower turn he had half a length the best of it, and increased his lead to three-quarters of a length at the three-quarter pole. As they came up the homestretch Lochiel got the whip freely, but he could not stand the race, and as Uncle John Harper's colors were carried to victory by the gallant little horse, the enthusiasm was intense. Lyttleton won the heat and race by a length and a half in 1:49.

THE MONMOUTH CUP.

Now came the race that has been the talk of the country for months, it being the event which was to settle the question of superiority between those superb horses, Longfellow and Harry Bassett. It was the grand consummation of a devout wish. When the bell summoned the horses to the track, all eyes were strained to catch a glimpse of the noted steeds and their owners. Longfellow was first to appear, and a prolonged cheer greeted him. He comes with a swinging step, low and long, his hair vibrating like the pendulum of a clock, hung carelessly and loosely, a consciousness of power in all his movements. Shortly another picture is presented for the admiration of the multitude. Harry Bassett, the king of the turf until yesterday, was led in and received a most generous greeting. He presented the picture of health, and in his preliminary gallop showed conspicuously his excellent points. The broad, square forehead, the fine, lean, firm and delicate muzzle and transparent ears, the fleet and wiry legs, the magnificently proportioned body and the well-developed muscle all combined to form a picture of admiration. But the time is up, and the judges ring the bell that summons the two stout champions to the battle, and the thousands who are present believe that the anticipations of months are about to be realized. The confirmation of hopes and fears, the glow of enthusiasm heightened or depressed, the consummation of the long desired effort to bring these monarchs together.

THE RACE.

They were started from the half-mile pole, and when they gallopted down to the starting point they were the all-absorbing objects of attention. They were now ready for the start. The starter sends them off, and Bassett has the best of it. He leads a length and keeps it half way round the lower turn, when Longfellow moves up and lays his quarter. In this way they pass the three-quarter pole, and are steered at a terrible pace up the homestretch. They are both apparently going easy, and being under a strong pull. As they approach the judge's stand, Longfellow headed Bassett and they passed it together. They now went round the turn, and Bassett having the inside, again showed half a length in front, and going so strong that his backers are jubilant. He pushes still further to the front and passes the quarter-pole with a lead of three-quarters of a length. As they go down the backstretch the mighty Longfellow strides along and covers an immensity of ground, and in soon again at the side of Bassett. The latter is going at his best and foreless the pace is a crier topers his great competitor, and shows his neck in front at the half-mile pole. On they come round the lower turn at the tremendous pace, and the backers of Bassett are in ecstacies as, on the lower turn, he again shows half his length ahead of his antagonist but when they come off the homestretch Longfellow again collared his antagonist, and Roe began to drive Bassett. Longfellow, however, came to the front, and led a length past the stand. He was received by a hearty cheer, but as they went to the turn and as got three lengths away from Bassett the enthusiasm knew no bounds. Bassett now received very whip, and as the tail swung round Longfellow kept opening the gap. The faces of Bassett's backers were now blanched with fear as Longfellow, keeping up the pace, opened a gap of six lengths at the quarter-pole. Now, they go down the backstretch, and the grandson of Leamington leaves Bassett eight lengths in the rear. The people are now frantic with delight, and the excitement knows no bounds. They are now at the half-mile pole and Longfellow has opened the gap to ten lengths. Uncle John Harper catches the enthusiasm, but the excitement is too much for his feeble frame to bear. On come the horses round the lower turn. Longfellow, sweeping along grandly, with head down, has now left poor Harry twenty lengths in the rear, and as he approaches the three-quarter pole, he is double that distance away from his now pumped-out competitor. Harper's stable-boys are dancing with delight at the head of the stretch, and ten the rider of Longfellow to ease him up, which he does, and he comes home the winner by nearly 300 yards, in 4:34, the excitement and enthusiasm that prevailed the whole institution we will not attempt to describe, as pen and ink would fail to do the scene justice, and may be better left to the imagination of those who were not present. Longfellow is now crowned the king of the turf, but we course that Bassett will again endeavor to wrest that proud title from him when they meet in the Saratoga Cup.

DESCRIPTION, PEDIGREE AND PERFORMANCES OF HARRY BASSETT.

Harry Bassett is a beautiful chestnut, and stands sixteen and a half hands high. He has a star in his forehead, with a slight blaze running down his face and inclining over the right nostril—two white feet behind half-way to the hocks. He has a good clean head, well set on a strong neck, running into powerful and well-inclined shoulders. Although he has plenty of height and long reach, he is compactly built—has fine back and loins, most powerful quarters and thighs, and ribs long and strong. He drops down well in the flank and shows remarkable strength in the stifles. His legs are flat and clean and he carries his feet well under him. Bassett was foaled in 1868, and is four years old, sired by Lexington, out of Canary Bird by imp. Albion; Second dam Pinola, by imp. Ainderby; Third dam, imp. Sweetbriar, by Recovery; Fourth dam, Primrose by Comus; Fifth dam, Cowslip, by Cockfighter; Sixth dam, Brown Javelin by Javelin; Seventh dam, Young Maiden by Highflyer; Eighth dam, Maiden by Matchem; Ninth dam, Mr. Pratt's Squirt, mare, by Squirt; Tenth dam, Lady Cage, by Mogul; Eleventh dam, Camilla, by Bay Bolton; Twelfth dam, Old Lady (Stirling's dam) by Fullicne's Chestnut Arabian; Thirteenth dam, by Rockwood; Fourteenth dam, by Basilisk. Harry Bassett first appeared as a two-year old in 1870, and started four times and was beaten once, and then when a little of condition, by Mary Louise, in the Saratoga Stakes, of three-quarters of a mile, July 14. He ran third in this race, and the time was 1:18¾. In his three-year-old form he ran away from every horse who came in competition with him, starting nine times and winning every race with ease. This year he has appeared three times, winning the Westchester Cup, and beating Lyttleton two and a quarter miles in 4:18¾, and distancing Metella in the two-mile-heat race in 3:30¼. Yesterday was his third appearance.

DESCRIPTION AND ANCESTRY OF LONGFELLOW.

Longfellow is a brown horse and was foaled in 1869. He stands within a fraction of being seventeen hands high, and is the largest racehorse in this country. The conformation of Longfellow has been the theme of admiration, and the critical turf-writers, who have pronounced him nearer to perfection than any other specimen of the equine race that has been presented in this country. Certain it is that Longfellow possesses immense propelling power, and at every bound covers a great deal of ground. He has immense turns of speed, has wheatear at the expense of stamina, has been a much-mooted question, which was decided yesterday. Longfellow, for a good racehorse, has been unfortunate, but his performances do him credit. He did not appear on the turf until he was three years old, and then in the Phœnix Hotel Stakes, of mile heats, at Lexington, Ky., when he was beaten by Esquirer, and distanced in the second heat. After this he appeared four times, and won each of his races. The Produce Stake, of two-mile heats, at Lexington, beating Twinkle and a bay filly by Lexington; time—1:52¾, 1:54. Won the Ohio Stake at Cincinnati, two-mile heats, Sept. 3, beating Pilgrim easily in 3:37¾, 3:35¾. Won the Post Stake, two-mile heats, at Memphis, Oct. 30, beating Defender, Morgan Scout, Mollie James, Irene Chapparal; time—3:40¾, 3:40. Also the Citizens Stake, two-mile heats, at Nashville, beating Morgan Scout, Lois Comer and Cordelia; time—3:41¾, 3:41. Morgan Scout won the first heat, but Longfellow distanced the lot in the second. As a four-year old he started five times and won four. The Monmouth Cup, at Long Branch, July 5, beating Helmbold, Recards and Freakness easily in 4:44¼; also Saratoga Cup, at Saratoga, where he beat Kingfisher, and ran a mile in 1:46, and the two miles and a quarter in 4:09¾; walked over for the purse of $600, two and three-quarter miles, at Saratoga Aug. 19. He met defeat at the hands of Helmbold in the four-mile dash at Saratoga, Aug. 22, but was a little "off." He was then taken West and started in two mile heats at Lexington, and beat Pilgrim in 3:40¾, 3:41¾. This year he opened the season by winning the mile and a half dash at Lexington, May 18, beating Metella and Arreola; time—2:43¾. He next won the Woolly Stake, three miles, at the same place, May 24, beating Metella, Tularia, Santa Ana and Hollywood in 5:09¾. The result of his race yesterday is before our readers.

The Mutuals Defeated by the Atlantics—Score 22 to 20.

The 300 spectators who went over to the Union Grounds yesterday, to witness the first game of the series between the Atlantics and Mutuals, little expected the defeat of the latter, yet such was actually the result, the Atlantics by good fielding and safe batting gaining a very creditable triumph, after a well-contested game.

ABYSSINIA

The Coronation of Prince Kassa—Gigantic Festivities—The New Monarch's Friendship for England.

A correspondent informs the Homeward Mail of the ceremony of crowning Prince Kassa of Tigre "King of Kings of Ethiopia, by the will of the people of Abyssinia." He has been crowned YOUARISSER, otherwise JOHN, Emperor of Ethiopia. The ceremony passed off very well and peacefully. There were upward of 200,000 people present. The camp reached for about eight miles; the plain of Axum was covered, and the feast lasted for ten days. A shed was built, reaching nearly a mile, where all the people feasted. About 20,000 cows were killed, and 40,000 gallons of honey wine were drank. The following is a translation of a letter from Prince KASSA, forwarded by Gen. KIRKHAM, both original and translation have reached us, and the contents are worthy of notice:

To the Editor of the Homeward Mail:

SIR: I am desired by the King of Kings, YOUARISSER, of Ethiopia, to write and inform you of what has taken place in Abyssinia since the English Mission left this country. Mr. MUNZINGER, when Consul, of France at Massowah, wrote me a letter, saying, "If you do not let the Roman Catholic priests teach their religion in your country, you know that I took the English troops to Magdala, and destroyed THEODORE and all his people; and you, if you do not like to receive the Roman Catholic priests, you shall be destroyed, like King THEODORE." I ask the Government of England and the people whether this is a proper letter for a Consul to write to a King of his own country, and also a Christian. I and my people are all baptized in the name of the Trinity; we all believe in the Gospel of the Christ; and if these Roman Catholic priests wish to teach their religion, there are plenty of wild people that are not baptized, in the Shankular country. I have written several letters to Mr. MUNZINGER on this subject, but he will not hear my words. I sent my people last year to Allet for the purpose of collecting my revenue; but when my people asked for the taxes, all the Roman Catholic priests and people said that they did not know any other King except the Roman Catholic priests, and they were baptized by them, and they would not pay any taxes, until I was forced to send a large force to make them pay; and then, when the taxes were demanded, they all ran away to the low country (Bewia Whuis) and Massowah, and I was obliged to take my taxes by force, and some of my people were killed in the attack upon the houses, but it was not by my orders. I have given these Roman Catholic priests orders to leave my country several times by letters and messengers, but it was all of no use; they still would force their religion on my people, and taught my people to look to them as their kings. I also wrote to Mr. MUNZINGER and to Mr. ZINGER, telling him that I did not want the Roman Catholic priests to misguide my people. Also, at the same time, these Roman Catholic priests and Consul MUNZINGER and their friends at Massowah were supplying one of my chiefs who had turned a rebel against my Kingdom, and assisted him to make war against me. He required to plunder my country and destroy my people; and when I sent an army against him he would run to Consul MUNZINGER and hide from my troops so as to avoid being taken; and when I got the victory over GOMEZ I found a letter in the treasury of GOMEZ that was written to the Consul of my country by the rebelling GOMEZ, that it he would give them permission to do what they liked in Abyssinia they would send him cannon, guns, powder, rockets, and all that he wanted to fight me; so, after all these things had happened, I sent an army to drive them out of my country; but they will not leave. Please let the people of England know this for my friendship to your people.

FRANCE.

More Communists Sentenced to Death by Court-Martial.

PARIS, July 2.—The trial by court-martial of the woman CLARIOT, who gained notoriety during the Communist reign in Paris by murdering a gendarme, and the man PHILIPPE, who was a prominent member of the Commune and participated in many of its most disgraceful acts, have just terminated. They were both convicted of the charges preferred against them, and sentenced to be executed.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, July 2—8 P. M.—The barometer has very generally fallen since Monday afternoon from New-York south and westward to the Mississippi. A small area of high barometer extends from Massachusetts to Nova Scotia. Light and fresh winds from the south west and north-west prevail from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico and coasts; easterly winds, with cloud and fog, from Cape Cod north-eastward. The temperature has fallen remarkably over this latter region and very generally throughout the Atlantic States. Threatening weather and light rains are reported from numerous isolated points in the South Atlantic States and the Valley of the Mississippi and tributaries. The rivers have very generally fallen a few inches. Telegraphic reports are much delayed from a number of stations.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably continue to fall very generally on Wednesday, without important general change in the weather, further than increasing cloudiness and more numerous light local storms throughout the region east of the Mississippi; threatening weather, possibly with rain, prevail in Northern New-England.

The Air Line Restored from Philadelphia to New-York.

PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—Contracts were today given out for building the Air Line Railroad between this city and New-York, passing through Bucks County, thence to Newark and joining the Stanhope Road to New-York. The road will cost $6,000,000. Work is to be commenced immediately. The route is some miles shorter than the present one and it is proposed to make the run between the two cities in two hours and fifteen minutes. The terminus of the road here will be the Ninth and Green streets depot of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

TIMES OFFICE, JULY 3—4 A. M.

FIRE THIS MORNING.

Destruction of an Immense Stock of Paper and Rags.

A Brilliant Spectacle—Exciting Scenes in a Tenement-House—Probable Destruction of an Entire Block.

At 1½ o'clock this morning flames were discovered on the main floor of the large brick building Nos. 7 and 9 Elm-street, occupied by TAYLOR & DARROW, wholesale dealers in paper, paper stock and rags. Owing to the inflammable nature of the contents, of the building the flames spread with rapidity, and in very short space of time the entire edifice, which has sixty feet front with a depth of 100 feet, was filled with fire.

The firemen were soon on the ground, and worked manfully to subdue the flames, but they were powerless, owing to the intense heat that was thrown out by the mass of burning material. At 2 o'clock it was evident that the entire building and contents were doomed, so the firemen bestowed their attention to the adjoining and adjacent buildings.

Nos. 11 and 13 are tenement buildings, the occupants were in great danger for a time, owing to the proximity of the fire. They were soon busily employed

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange yesterday, Tuesday, July 2, under the direction of Hon. HENRY ALLEN, Public Administrator A. J. BLECKER, SON & Co., sold the two-story and attic brick front house and lot No. 62 James-st., east side, between Madison and Oak sts., (lot 16.8 by 100,) for $8,450, the purchaser being ANNIE VARLEY. The same firm also offered, at public auction, the premises known as Nos. 26 and 28 Coles-st., embracing a plot of ground 50 by 100, with tenement buildings upon the same, renting at the rate of $1,400 per annum, but no bid being received for the property it was withdrawn and the sale postponed until further notice. E. H. LUDLOW & Co., by order of the United States District Court, under the direction of JOHN H. PLATT, Esq., receiver, disposed of a lease of the premises Nos. 244, 246 and 248 West Twenty-seventh-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, expiring May 1, 1873; ground rent $600 per annum. The premises, it was stated, sub-let for over $3,000 per annum, and the lessee has the privilege of purchasing the lot at a valuation at the expiration of the term: half cash and half mortgage, for five years, or he may remove the buildings within six months after expiration of the term, and hold the premises during that time without rent. The sub-lease was sold with the principal lease. The lots are, together, 75 ft. 6 in. x 92.9, and the buildings on the same are stores and tenements, stables, &c. In fair order. No other business was transacted.

The auction sale by Messrs. DUBOIS & COLLINS, July 1, by A. D. MULLICK, Jr., & BROTHER, was quite largely attended and the results successful, all the lots offered, 111 in number, having sold at satisfactory figures, while the aggregate of the sale reached the sum of $18,365. The property sold is located on Wooddridge and East avenues, the Middlesex and Essex Turnpike, and Bond, Walnut, Washington and First streets. The principal buyers at the sale were the following: H. Holmes, of Newark; Joseph C. Vandeveer, of Woodbridge; H. J. Wilson, of Jersey City; F. G. Gedney and John Teevan, of New York; and the Perth Amboy Bound Brook and Easton Railroad Company. Full details of the auction are appended.

For the only lot at the Exchange auction announced is one under a legal order, in charge of MULLER, WILKINS & Co., in which two extra size lots, with tenement buildings thereon, situate on the north side of Eleventh-street, 125 feet west of First-avenue, will be sold. At Long Branch today, on the ground, at 10 o'clock, A. D. MULLICK, Jr., & Bro. advertise the sale of a large number of building lots, situate on Pond and Brighton avenues, adjoining the West End Hotel property.

E. C. FERGUSON, No. 111 Broadway, reports having recently sold at private sale four tall lots on the south-west corner of New-avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-third-street for $40,000.

The Road runs from Buffalo to the Detroit River, and is the Eastern link in the new AIR LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, and has been under construction for about two years past by railroad men who have seen the necessity for a STEEL RAIL, LOW GRADE SHORT ROUTE between the great railroad systems which diverge from Chicago, Toledo and Buffalo.

Among the builders of the road, by whose cash subscriptions 220 miles (out of 230) have already been graded, bridged and made ready for the superstructure, a large part of the steel rails bought, all of the materials for the stations, and a part of the equipment purchased, are:

MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN F. TRACY, DAVID DOWS, WM. L. SCOTT, HENRY FARNHAM, R. A. FORSYTH, HENRY H. FOSTER, JOHN M. BURKE, M. L. SYKES, JR., B. F. ALLEN, all directors, either in the Chicago and Northwest, or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; GEO. OPDYKE, of the Midland Road; JOHN B. ALLEN, SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, J. S. CASEMENT, J. & J. CASEY, O. S. CHAPMAN, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, and F. H. WINSTON.

THE ROAD will be

33 MILES SHORTER THAN ANY OTHER ROAD,

either BUILT or in contemplation between Buffalo and Chicago, and will also shorten the distance between Toledo and Buffalo twenty-three miles.

THE MAXIMUM GRADE on the entire line does not exceed FIFTEEN FEET to the mile—and Ninety-six per cent of the road IS STRAIGHT.

PACIFIC RAILROAD OF MISSOURI,
SEVEN PER CENT.
FREE OF TAX,
SECOND
MORTGAGE BONDS.

Road is over twenty-two years old, is well equipped and well managed. Its stock sells at 80 to 85. Earning sixty per cent. for ordinary running expenses, the road earned in 1867 fifty-two per cent more than interest on First and Second Mortgage Bonds, and has increased its earnings each year, so that in 1871 it earned more than double the interest on First and Second Mortgage Bonds. A sinking fund of $50,000 per annum is one condition of the trust. We offer these bonds as that they yield 8 per cent income, without taking account of profit from the inevitable rise in the price of the bonds from the action of the sinking fund. We have selected these bonds as relatively the best investment security in the market, and would invite the closest scrutiny to them. For price or further particulars, apply to

Terrible Effects of the Fierce Heat Yesterday.

Over One Hundred Cases of Sun-Stroke—More than Half of Them Fatal—The Scourge Elsewhere.

There were scores of people who left home yesterday morning in full health, joyous and hopeful, as all are in bright, beautiful Summer, with no premonition of coming evil, no foreshadowing of approaching woe. They parted from their friends as all do who go to return again shortly; there was a kiss to the wife, a nod to the children, a hand-shaking. Had an epidemic prostrated them, they would have again met, and ere it proved fatal uttered a few words of recognition and farewell; all this might have been done before the cold seal of death pressed their lips; but these went forth, and when they passed the threshold it were as if they were on the way to battle, though they knew it not. The rifle-bullet through the heart might bring death surely and quickly, but it could do so no more swiftly nor potently than the sun-shafts by which they fell. No love-messages, tearful adieus, nor soothing words passed their lips. There was no time for prayer; lightning could not scorch and paralyze humanity swifter than did the heat of the sun. It is easy to glance along the array of death statistics below, compute their number, and mark the people we knew. It is harder to comprehend the sudden sorrow which afflicts so many homes, and so unexpectedly, that it is as if a battle were fought in our midst without word or warning, and the bloody corpses were carried to homes that knew of the conflict only by the coming of the lifeless.

Had not a slight breeze prevailed yesterday, the mortality would have been far more frightful. As it is, an epidemic could hardly be more fatal in its results than were the sun and heat upon suffering humanity. It caused a general stagnation in the business of Wall-street, and left gold weak and stocks inanimate.

The temperature, as recorded by the thermometer at DICKINSON'S drug store, No. 3 Park-row, varied from 81° to 94°. In Brooklyn the heat was even greater, reaching 100° at half-past two o'clock P. M.
